

British Admiral Sir F. C. D. Sturdee, whose squadron engaged the German fleet off the Falkland Islands in the South Atlantic and won a victory.

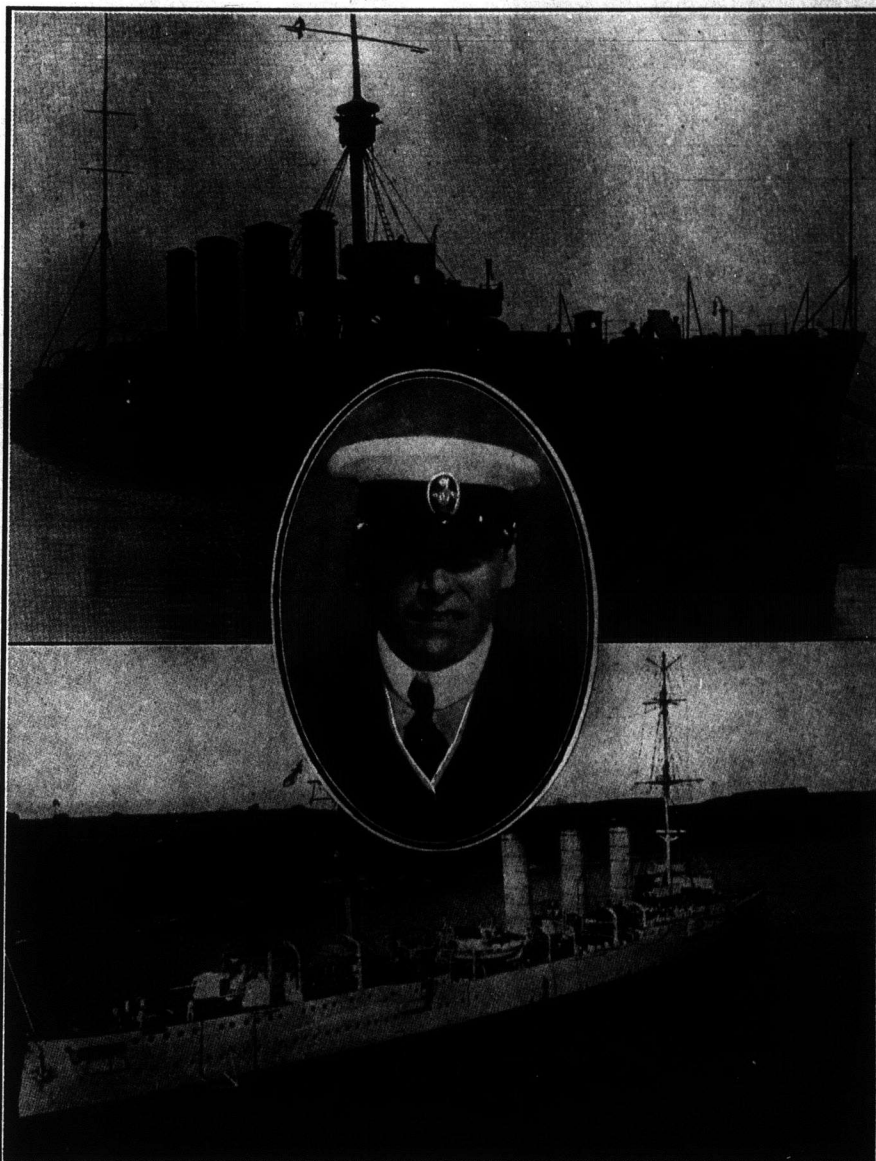

A view of the Spa Grounds of Scarborough, the fashionable English watering resort on the coast, 200 miles from London and directly opposite Kiel, the German naval base, which has been shelled by the German fleet making a sudden dash across the North Sea.

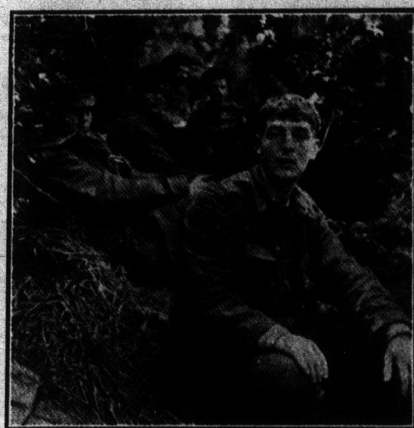

Canadian soldiers mud-larking on Salisbury Plains.

This mine was washed ashore. When in position in the sea it floats the other way up, the anchor chains being attached to the eye-holes seen above.

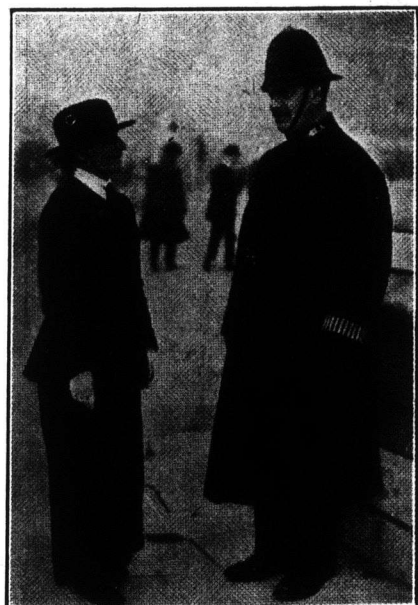

The top photo is H.M.S. Sydney which terminated the Emden's destructive career. The Emden is shown below and her captain, Von Muller.

In a British trench near La Bassee.

The German spy (Carl Lody) recently shot at the London tower. Lody is on the left.

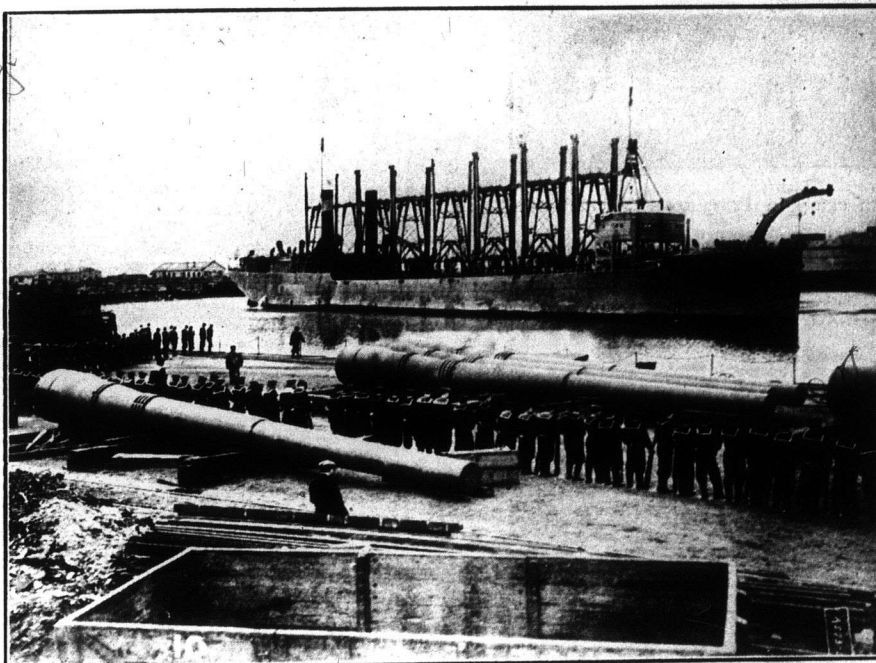

One of the new women police volunteers on duty, London, England.

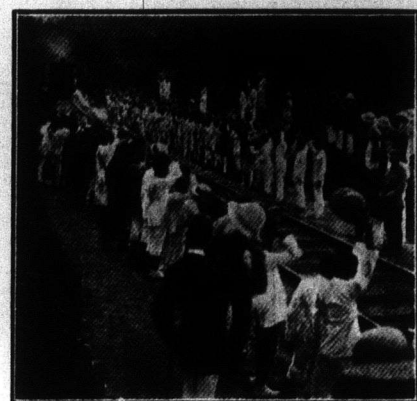

Soldiers marching through Sydney, Australia, to embark to England.

British soldiers in their new fur jackets at the front.

American Christmas ship, Jason, at Plymouth, where big guns are waiting to be mounted on British ships. The size of the guns can be judged by comparing the line of British sailors drawn up in front.

A contingent arriving at Peradeniya, Ceylon, for training.