

"Smash the state" Liberal 'lefts off' campaign

TORONTO(CUP) — Former finance minister Donald Macdonald announced today that if he wins the Liberal leadership convention in March, he will force an early election and campaign under the slogan, "Smash the state!"

"I realize some people will be surprised by my shift to the left," said Macdonald, "but they just don't understand the true political climate in Canada at this point in time. All this crap about the new conservatism—that's just a media event."

In response to a question about his enormous annual income from his Bay Street law practice, Macdonald said that he needed the money to finance his proposed revolution. "Have you looked at the price of Molotov cocktails lately? Overthrowing governments isn't for poor people, you know!"

Macdonald concluded his statement with a promise that if elected next June, the Canadian state will be smashed by December, and he will then devote himself to other matters such as his proposed income tax cut.

U's full of it

"We have to get our shit together," says Professor Hemmer Hoid head of the proctology department of the U of A.

"We are waiting for a grant from the government, but they are usually full of it," adds Hoid.

"I do not want to be rash or cheeky but we have been getting a bum deal from the government. If they don't give us a grant soon, they won't come out of this smelling of roses," Hoid exclaims.

Dr. Rhea, a specialist in the field, adds, "we have been sitting around waiting for the dirt on this project for so long that when it finally comes out I will be put at ease and the department will be able to function regularly."
