

small orchard of hardy fruit trees. He will not only add to his material wealth, but to the beauty of the landscape, and will provide a source of great attraction to his home. He will have helped to untangle the intricate mazes of nature's requirements and added a new charm to life.

He will enjoy exquisite pleasures in strolling in the orchard in the spring time and sniffing the balmy breezes, scented anew from his blossoming trees. In the fullness of his expanding soul he may exclaim, this is a grand old world after all and he who owns a good garden doubles the joys of life. He will feel a consciousness of having acted well his part, and he will leave to posterity a heritage better than gold.
