There is nothing like Sunlight Soap for Household Utensils.

When you have to use hard water it is not an easy matter to wash household utensils. To do good washing you should have good soap and soft water (rain-water). If you use hard water you must have good soap, and the best soap you can get is Sunlight Soap because it softens the hard water and makes a copious creamy lather. Use Sunlight Soap for all household purposes and the results will surprise you.

A SCIENTIFIC PRINCE.

Japan Has One Like His Counterparts In Europe.

Japan, like Austria, Russia and Bavaria, has a Prince of the blood who devotes himself almost entirely to scientific pursuits; and the oriental counterpart of the learned Grand Duke Constantine of Russia, president of the Imperial Academy of Sciences at St. Petersburg, or Archduke Louis Salvator of Austria, whom I portrayed in these letters a few days ago under his incognito, "Prof. Neufeld," and of the eminent oculist, Duke Charles Theodore of Bavaria, is to be found in the Imperial Prince Kikunaro Yamashina, who, at 33 years of age, is in the line of succession to the throne of the Mikado, says the Marquis de Fontenay.

Whereas, most of the other members of the reigning house of the Land of the Rising Sun are identified with the army and with the navy, this particular scion thereof has devoted his time, his energies, and his considerable wealth to scientific pursuits and investigations, and has just established on the summit of Mount Tsukuba, on the eastern coast of Japan, fifty miles from Tokyo, the most magnificently equipped meteorological station in the length and breadth of Asia. Indeed, it may be questioned whether it is not the finest in the world, being furnished with all the most recently invented instruments, not merely for the recording of meteorological changes but also of those seismic movements which are so frequent and so severe in Japan.

Indeed, Dai Nippon is the land of earthquakes par excellence. No better spot could have been chosen for the establishment of this station than Mount Tsukuba, which, according to Japanese legend and national tradition, was set up by the divinites, Izanaga and Izanami, the creator and the creatress of Japan, as a bulwark against the tremendous waves of the Pacific ocean. It is a curious fact, and in a line with Japanese traditions, that this bulwark, along with the entire eastern coast of Japan, has been rising gradually higher and higher from the sea for centuries past. Geologists have verified this.

Near the summit of the mountain, which commands a superb view not only of the Pacific ocean but also of the entire plain and city of Tokyo towards Mount Fujiyama, there is an ancient and more picturesque temple dedicated to Izanaga, which is the bourn of many pilgrimages.

Max O'Reilly's Ideal Wife.

The following original description of the perfect wife is taken from a book by the late Max O'Reilly, the French humorist, published in Paris:—"Marry a woman," he writes, "smaller than yourself. Do not marry a woman whose laugh is forced and does not spring from the heart, but marry a woman who enjoys a joke and looks at the bright side of everything."

"Marry a girl who is a bit of a philosopher. If you take a girl to the theatre, and hearing there are no seats in the stalls or circle, she calmly exclaims: 'Now mind, let us go into the gallery,' marry her. It will be easy to live happily with a girl willing to sit even on the back benches with her husband."

"Do not marry a woman who has the fast ways of what is called 'smart society.' If you go to pay a visit and must wait half an hour while she finishes her toilet do not marry her. But if she comes to you immediately her hair put up in a hurry, but neatly and simply dressed, she is a girl of common sense. Marry her, especially if she is not too prolix in her excuses for appearing in negligé."

"Marry a girl who cares a lot for her father, who takes an interest in seeing that his study is in order, who likes to sit on his knee, and who calls him by all sorts of loving and infantile names. The girl who shows so much affection for her father, who won't let him go out without seeing that his clothes are immaculate, who, when at length satisfied with papa's appearance, kisses him before he goes off—that girl will make a model wife."

Art Works Destroyed.

On New Bond street, in London, last year a Turner worth $60,000 was destroyed by a charcoal drawing. The Turner was a water-color drawing, and a painting in oils hung beside it. The owner pointed to the painting and said:—"That picture is dusty. Rub a damp cloth over it."

But the charwoman by mistake rubbed her damp cloth over the water-color, turning it into a blot, a smudge, and thus one of the finest Turners disappeared from the world. A boy shot a marble from a sling in Paris two years ago. The marble went through a window of the Luxembourg Gallery and utterly destroyed a Meissonier worth $17,000. A Macmonnies statuette was stolen from a van in Boston, and some ignorant students on Commonwealth avenue stood it up and saved it.

A collector brought from Japan last year an ivory tusk that was carved from end to end with monkeys—over a hundred monkeys, walking amicably together, holding one another's tails. The piece was fifteen century work, and it was valued easily at $7,000. He dropped it out of a fifth storey window one night.

A Negro's Trick.

"It may be that the average negro is ignorant," says Representative Moon of Tennessee, "but I had one in my employ who was one of the shrewdest fellows I ever ran across."

"Jim, for that was his name, was a good negro, but he loved gin better than he did his Maker, and he would not pay a debt if there was any earthly way to get out of it. One day Jim went to the store armed with a gallon jug and asked for a quart of gin, telling the merchant that he was prepared to settle. The fluid was put in, and then it was discovered that Jim had no money. Forthwith the merchant poured the quart back in the measure, while Jim picked up his jug and walked out smiling."

"He had put in about a quart of water, and, of course, he had put in, and much gin and water in the jug. The grocer's gin in his barrel was a little weaker, but Jim's quart was strong enough to bridge over on."

Cooks and Bakes perfectly at the same time

There is not another range built in which the heat may be regulated so that you can bake in the oven and cook on the top at the same time without spoiling one or the other.

But you can do both equally well at the same time on the Pandora, because its heat is not wasted and is at all times under the simplest, most positive control.

If you do the cooking of your household you can appreciate exactly what this means.

GROUP IS DEADLY!

It must be stopped quickly. Nothing so serious as Nervine. Give it internally, and rub it on chest and throat—croup soon vanishes. No doctor can write a more efficient prescription than Polson's Nervine, which reaches the trouble and cures quickly. The marvellous power of the Nervine will surprise you: it's the best household remedy for coughs, colds, sore chest, croup, and internal pain of every kind. Large bottles have been sold by all dealers for nearly fifty years at 25c.

CHARING CROSS.

A very pretty event took place on Wednesday, Sept. 6th, when Miss Olive Drury, daughter of George Drury, Charing Cross, was united in marriage to Mr. Ernest Avery, a prominent farmer of Thamesville. Rev. Mr. Salton performed the ceremony, while Miss Edna, sister of the bride, acted as bridesmaid, and Mr. Avery, brother of the groom, as best man. After a sumptuous repast the happy couple left for Thamesville, where they will reside.

Mrs. Wier, who has been visiting her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Wier, for the past two weeks, left Tuesday morning for her home in Chicago.

Mrs. H. Russell, who has been under the doctor's care for a week, is improving nicely.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. H. Hunter, who have been summering at Erie Beach during the warm months, leave Thursday for their home in Washington.
