A Brighter Outlook.

To-day's summary of war news is a cheerful one. It is a picture of brighter colours than we have seen for long. The British hold securely the gains of the last week, and the value of which will soon be made apparent; while the peril that has hung for a fateful week and more like a dark cloud over the Italians has been dispelled, we are told. Great British and French reinforcements of infantry and artillery have been streaming for days past up to the front and will soon be in the thickest of the fray. It is great news. It means, to pursue the metaphor that we have chosen to apply to this phase of the war, that the boomerang has reached the end of its forward flight and is about to turn.

In thirty months of continuous warfare, marked by extraordinary feats and deeds of heroism, the Italians have done nothing more glorious and heroic than this defence of the Piave. The full story of it will not be told until the war is over, if then, but it is enough to know that our Allies have held at bay superior forces advancing to attack after attack with a savage desperation born of the knowledge that success is an imperative necessity. They have had no success and failure now stares them in the face. Not the least valuable part to the Allies' cause of the great achievement is the toll exacted from the ranks of the enemy. The losses have been great on both sides, but it is only reasonable to expect that there will be greater on the side of the attack. If we dismiss from our minds the misleading regard for territory, the exact locus of the battle, which is comparatively immaterial, and omit the much more important bolstering up of Austrian hopes and morale, we will see how great a gain the whole business has been to the Allies. For the enemy, with dwindling reserves, has come into the open and been held there. And there he must remain and there, wily nilly, he must fight and lose more men.

It is safe to say that Italy is now safe. With the line strongly reinforced, it is most unlikely that an inch more ground will be ceded. If it is, it will be ceded voluntarily, that the Allies may the more easily assume the offensive; but this would not seem to be necessary now. It will be a thousand pities if the Allies do not pour into this theatre forces great enough to permit them to assume a great offensive and roll back the invading flood. The West front may be more important, but it can afford to wait; it should not have precedence at this moment. Winter will soon be upon it, a strong enemy there but mild enough on the Venetian plains. It is not enough to hold the enemy. The boomerang—we are at it again—must not merely fall spent to the earth; it must be guided back up on the heads of those who threw it. We believe that it will. We believe that it will be guided back up on the heads of those who threw it. We believe that it will be guided back up on the heads of those who threw it.

The late message from Petrograd, giving the views of the Morning Post's correspondent upon the situation, makes better reading than we have had for long from that part of the world. It bears all the marks of probability. We hardly needed to be told that the Bolshevik rule has been a "ghastly failure," but it is comforting to know that it has proved so in Russia. Its latest feat, the abolition of class distinctions, is a false sample of its utter childishness. Before it is tumbled down, we suppose, it will have annulled, by a decree, the law of gravity, or issued a proclamation altering the seasons. In Kaleidoscope, the Cossack commander, it has been evident for some time, the hope of Russia and of the Allies lies. He holds the gold reserve, is extending his control over the entire grain of Russia and heads a great southern Union in which are comprised the best elements in Russia. His command of the food supply encourages the hope that he will be able to wrench the mastery from the Bolshevik rabble without the violent expedients of civil war. But even if that cannot be avoided it is likely to be brief. The loose-jointed conglomeration that misrules Petrograd and Moscow will fall to pieces before any earnest and organized attack. It will be a better and brighter day for everyone when it does and a strong hint at last taken up by the reins of government in this unfortunate country.

WOUNDED WITH CANADIANS.—Mr. Edward Taylor, of Ayre & Sons, Ltd., has received word from Ottawa that his brother George, who was a despatch rider with the C. E. F. in France, has been wounded in France. He had been three years on active service and took part in many big engagements.

Reuter's Message.

MORE VICTORIA CROSSES.

London, Nov. 26 (via Reuter's Ottawa Agency).—The London Gazette announces the award of twenty new Victoria Crosses, the recipients including five Australians, one Canadian and one South African.

Acting Corporal Philip Kotnowal, Canadian Infantry, is awarded the Victoria Cross for conspicuous bravery and leadership. When in charge of a section he had the difficult task of mopping up collars, craters and machine gun emplacements. Under his able direction all resistance was overcome successfully and heavy casualties inflicted on the enemy. In doing so he himself bayoneted three of the enemy and attacked single handed seven others in a crater, killing them all. On reaching the objective a machine gun was holding up the right flank causing many casualties. Kotnowal rushed forward and entered the emplacement, killed the crew and brought back the gun to our lines. The next day he again attacked single handed another machine gun emplacement with explosives. This non-commissioned officer alone killed at least sixteen of the enemy and during two days' fighting carried on continuously his good work until severely wounded.

The stories of heroism related in the Gazette are nearly all so remarkable that differentiation is difficult. Acting Lieut. Col. Lewis Evans, D.S.O., Royal Highlanders, commanding the Lincoln, was awarded the "V.C." for most conspicuous bravery and leadership. Col. Evans took his battalion in perfect order through a terrific enemy barrage and personally formed up all units and led them to the assault. While a strong machine gun emplacement was causing casualties and the troops were working round the flanks, Col. Evans rushed at it himself, and by firing his revolver through the loophole forced the garrison to capitulate. After capturing the first objective he was severely wounded in the shoulder, but refused to be bandaged and reformed his troops, pointed out all future objectives and again led his battalion forward. He was again badly wounded, but nevertheless continued to command until the second objective was won. After consolidation he collapsed from loss of blood, but as there were numerous casualties he refused assistance, and by his own efforts ultimately reached the dressing station. His example of cool bravery was imitated in all ranks and the highest valor and determination.

Sergeant Wm. Francis Burton, Rifle Brigade, was given the Cross for most conspicuous bravery when this conspicuous act of his company was held up by machine gun firing at point blank range. He shouted to the men next to him to wait a few minutes, and going forward alone to what seemed certain death, killed the enemy gunners and carried the gun to the company's objective, where he subsequently used it with great effect. By this exceptionally gallant deed the progress of the attack was assured. About a quarter of an hour later it was observed that the battalion on the right was being impeded by a party of about forty of the enemy, who were enfilading them. Burton, with two others, ran forward and got behind the enemy, killing six and capturing two officers and twenty-nine men.

BRITISH TROOPS IN ITALY.

London, Nov. 27 (via Reuter's Ottawa Agency).—Reuter's correspondent at Italian headquarters describes the magnificent spectacle of British troops marching into Italy, comprising cavalry, artillery and infantry, extending along the roads for miles and with all other branches of the army following. The infantry had been marching steadily for days, making sixteen miles a day. The artillery is equipped with a great number of guns and is accompanied by endless lines of lorries, carts, pontoons and other accessories of a complete army. Telegraphing last evening, the correspondent says the enemy "is vigorously pressing at three points. The first is Tomba Mountain and Monferena. The latter, being the spur of the Tomba Mountain, has been the scene of a desperate battle. The British forces have been defeated. The British forces are eager to get into the fight and the Austro-Germans may soon be unpleasantly surprised.

The Red Line 'Round the Top.

The Goodrich auto tires can stand the hardest kind of strain, such rubber in a pair of boots is sure to bring you gain. Now in the Hipness you have got the best of Goodrich stuff, to other rubbers to lay claim to being built as tough. The home of Hipness rubbers is at Akron, Ohio; there's a man knows all about them and his name is "Natty" Snow, and when you visit Water Street please into Bowring's drop, he'll show you those grand rubbers with the red line round the top. No rubbers can compare with them since "Adam" was a boy, there wasn't any made that gave like Hipness so much joy. They're just the thing for those who toil beneath the fruitful earth, and there's many at Wabana can attest the Hipness worth; for the Hipness boots are tougher than the miner's bar of steel, and the farmer and the fisherman can guarantee they're real; in fact we are not bluffing, truth alone will ever stand, when we tell you that the Hipness is the best in Newfoundland. You may travel Terra Nova and no matter where you go you will come across the Hipness made at Akron, Ohio. So to-day we would advise you to walk into Bowring's shop and buy a pair of rubbers with the red line round the top.—Advt.

McMurdo's Store News

TUESDAY, Nov. 27, 1917. Many children, especially those who are a little backward in their growth, suffer at this time of year from persistent cough, a cough that the use of ordinary remedies do not reach, and instead can carry be expected to cure, as this condition is partly the result of the general state of their system. For such children we can safely recommend our Malt and Oil preparation, which has now stood the test of several autumns and winters, and may be expected to correct this trouble sooner than anything else. Our Malt and Oil is easily taken as there is absolutely no taste or odor of Cod Liver Oil on it, while the Malt ensures its digestion. Large bottles, Price $1.

FINGER NAIL CARE.

The purpose of the finger nail is to protect the tips of the fingers against pressure and to give them firm support. It is said that they actually add to the facility of the fingers, making more acute the delicate sense of touch. Finger nails are made of the same substance as that which goes to form the feathers of birds, the claws of animals and the fins of fish.

Healthy nails are not flat, but curve slightly, of light rosy color and smooth surface. Brittleness is a defect which is usually due to a depleted state of the health.

Absolute cleanliness is a hygienic principle which should never be disregarded, since the space between the nail and flesh forms a lodgment for diseased germs. Soiled nails are not only evidence of contempt for your friends good opinion of you but they are often the source of infection and illness.

With a thorough manicure once a week and three minutes attention every morning the coral tips may be kept in perfect order. For the home manicure the following instruments are necessary: A pair of pointed scissors, a thin sharp flexible file, an orange wood stick, sand paper, leveling file, a polisher, a jar of powdered pumice stone and a small bottle of peroxide of hydrogen.

The first matter to be considered is the filing, which must be accomplished while the nails are hard. The hands must not be plunged into the soapy bath until after the filing. When using the file see that the flesh at the side of the nail is pressed down, so the instrument will achieve a straight smooth line, leaving no ragged places on the edge.

A little scart skin or thick cuticle will cling to the outline of the nail but that is afterward removed with the beveling file. The shaping depends, of course, upon personal taste.

Your Boys and Girls.

Every mother of young children should look carefully after the heat of the house. She should have the thermometer fastened outside the window, not where the sun will shine on it all day, but in an unprotected place where the winter's winds will always strike it. By this she can tell how warm to wrap up the youngsters or whether it is a fit day for them to play out of doors.

A very young child ought not to play out of doors very long if the thermometer is below zero, because little feet will get chilled unless great care is exercised.

Provided a child of four or older, is well wrapped up and the sun is shining, a brisk walk or play can be enjoyed at almost any temperature, provided the body is kept on the move and the feet are kept dry.
