The mother who loves her baby and yet is unfortunately not able to rear him in Nature's way cannot go wrong if she follows the advice of doctors and mothers, based on a century's experience, and feeds him on "Nevae's Food," which ensures baby being properly nourished. Being rich in the flesh-forming albuminoids and bone-forming salts, it builds bone and flesh, assists teething, gives healthy sleep, and is easily assimilated and digested. If your baby is fed on Nevae's Food, he will be free from teething troubles, rickets, and other similar infant complaints, and will grow up healthy, happy and contented. And these are facts which should have weight with a mother when choosing her baby's food.

EVERY MOTHER should send for Free Nourishing Food, which will be delivered on receipt of 2¢ in postage. Booklet, "Hints About Baby," sent on receipt of 1 cent postage.

Handicrafts Exhibition.

The exhibition of Handicraft held yesterday afternoon in Victoria Hall by Miss M. E. Smith, supervisor of War Aides, proved very interesting. Miss Smith is training six of our young ladies Misses Doyle, Ledingham, Taylor, Barker, Roper and Willis, in the art of weaving, baskets making and wood carving. Already numerous articles of superior merit have come from the hands of these talented young ladies who will in turn train the returned soldiers and sailors now in hospital in these profitable industries. Miss Smith and her aides are to be highly complimented on the excellence of the exhibition.

The Law of Diminishing Returns.

When you come up against a law of nature you might just as well surrender. You cannot parley with Gravitation nor circumvent Chemical Affinity. And there is one Natural Law that gives us a deal of comfort, because it assures us that figures do lie, trends and tendencies do not keep on until everything is smashed, and, no matter how badly things are progressing, after a while they ball up, stop, fall and lose their power.

This law is known as the Law of Diminishing Returns. For instance, Cholera breaks out; there are 30 cases one day, 60 the next, 90 the next. Statisticians, scientists and pessimists point out that in a certain number of days the whole population will be wiped out. This never happens, however. For some reason the pest ceases, weakens, passes.

A merchant conducts his business so that it increases so much every year; but after a while that increase always stops. If it did not, he would by and by own the whole earth.

German efficiency and power rapidly grew—to a certain point. Then it crashed. So no matter what is going on, cheer up, there will come a time when it will cease going on.

No law is unlimited. If Gravitation were unchecked, the universe would speedily congregate into one lump. Other laws, fortunately, constantly contravene and balance it; hence we have the swinging stars, and life and motion on earth.

Just now the force that is threatening civilization is the new found power of organized labor. What is to prevent it, we asked alarmed, from going ahead until representative government is overthrown, capital destroyed, and brain everywhere enslaved to brawn?

What is to prevent the absolute carism of the organized workers? Answer: The Law of Diminishing Returns.

After a while labor autocracy will get so top-heavy it will fall. Already it shows signs. The printing unions of New York bitterly quarreled among themselves. There has been rebellion against the leaders of some of the railway brotherhoods.

There are in every movement a vigorous incipency, a point of maturity, then decay. Rome reached a certain point and crumbled. The medieval church broke and scattered at its period of greatest temporal power. The slave oligarchy in the United States went just so far. The magnificence of the Bourbons in France vanished in Revolution. The Kaiser went up and up, like a rocket, to a certain height; there was a shower of stars, and he came down like a stick.

Sooner or later the arbitrary, high-woman, autocratic rule of this country by organizations of combines or of labor will break and fall.

The thing that will break it will be the Law of Diminishing Returns.—Current Opinion.

An Evil Precedent.

The most crafty and unscrupulous game ever crowned with complete success ended on July 17, 1870, when the Imperial Government of France was led on by Bismarck's manipulation of events to declare war against Prussia. The story of the alteration of the Enns telegrams is too familiar for repetition. Probably it was the masterpiece of Bismarck's diplomatic career, and he himself seems to have been of that opinion, since in his later years he was not unwilling to boast of the methods adopted in order to provoke that outbreak of national feeling in France, by which war was made inevitable. Though Napoleon III. long had been credited in popular estimation, particularly in England, with Machiavellian craft, in reality he was outclassed hopelessly in this line by his Prussian antagonist, who forced him into a struggle for which he was wholly unprepared, and in a way calculated to cause him to forfeit the sympathies of Europe. "Our good old German god," unctuously exclaimed Moltke, when the alteration was effected in the telegram, "is not willing to let us perish in distraze." But, in truth, the success attendant upon the incredible plot has proved in the end disastrous to Germany. The weapons wielded with such dexterity by Bismarck have proved to be double-edged in hands less able; while the methods of Berlin, ever since have been viewed with distrust and scrutinized with anxious care. Although in 1914 the Bismarckian precedents were followed with fidelity as far as circumstances permitted, they were far, indeed, from achieving equal success. In 1870, it is safe to say that Germany had the sympathies of the great majority of the neutral world; while Bismarck's successors in 1914 contrived hopelessly to compromise her at the outset.
