RACING AT ST. THOMAS.

A race has been arranged to come off at the St. Thomas Driving Park between five horses owned by gentlemen in St. Thomas, London and the county, to decide which is the best horse. Each of the five gentlemen will put in $100, the winner to take the pot. Among the horses which will start are Dr. Evely's, of St. Thomas, Martin O'Meara's and W. J. Thompson's, of London. The other two gentlemen have not fully decided.—[St. Thomas Journal.

HORSE LOVE.

Some mares, particularly those of very sensitive organization, are excessively jealous of their offspring. Goldsmith Mail was one of that kind. It is related of her that when her first foal wis brought forth she would allow no one to come near it. One day Charley, her old attendant when she was in Budd Doble's stable, visited Fashion farm. Charley and the Maid were once firm friends, and to test the endurance of that friendship Charley concealed himself near the doughty old mare and allowed her to hear his voice. The Maid was browsing in a paddock, with her colt by her side. On hearing Charley's voice she instantly raised her head, gave a whinny of delight, and with that bold, free, sweeping stride that in years gone by had electrified thousands, dashed about the paddock in search of her old friend. When Charley appeared she went to the fence over which he leaned, and showed her joy in every action. No only did she welcome him, but invited him to fondle her buby. Reund about the two she circled, uttering a low whinny which expressed a mother's pride and love. She pushed the colt up to Charley, smothing its coat with her tongue, and asked him in the plainest horse language to admire it. It was a beautiful picture of confidence by well, and had no fears for the youngster, but let any one else go near her and a pair of twinkling heels warned him to keep his distance.—Detroit Free Press.

San Francisco, April 29.—Billy Mahon and Billy Shannon, local middle-weights, fought at the Occidental Athletic Club last in gift for a purse of $1,250. Shannon was a hard fight.

The Sydney Referee thus discusses Jack The Sydney Referee thus discusses Jack Dempsey's defeat of Australian Billy McCarthy at the California Athletic Club: "Our man has been beaten fairly and squarely on his merits by the best middle-weight on the top of the earth in one of the fairest clubs known to exist. We make no excuses; our champion, the best at his weight Australia has ever bred, has gone under to a better man. If his hands had stood, or if he had fought in his own foxy manner, the result might have been very different. Yes, that's so. There is always an if of some sort in fighting. In fact, if Dempsey hadn't won he would have lost. Of course, it's always that way, but the fact remains that he did win, and won fairly in a manly, straightforward manner, and the Referee is proud to hail him champion middle-weight pugilist of the world, the unapproachable 'Nonpareil.'"

DECEIVED AND DESPERATE.

Toronto, April 29.—Martha McLean, a domestic, shot at Nathaniel Henderson, her lover, and then tried to kill herself by taking laudanum. The shot was not fatal and the laudanum dose not strong enough. Henderson is a machinist working at Burk's shop on Sheppard street, and the girl went there yesterday morning shortly before noon, charged Henderson with having got her into trouble, and asked him to marry her. He refused. She pulled out a revolver Ryan. Umpire—O'Dea.

astonishment found that for each year labor a man received 900 pieces of silver, while for the same period to a woman occupying a position where the labor and responsibility were equal to or greater than a man's, only 400 pieces of silver were given. From this the number of pieces given diminished until a new work woman received just sufficient to feed and lodge her and procure her one new gown and a pair of sandals per year. These girls betrayed no signs of poverty, but that did not surprise me, as in every regard their noble self-respect won the admiration of all beholders. Upon viewing the unjust payment a cry half rose to the lips of some of the younger and weaker ones. All then turned to their head-gardener, holding out their hands with a mutely-appealing gesture. He answered by a look of pititul commiseration, while from among their ranks a sweet voice mockingly quoted:

"It's oh! to be a slave."

"It's oh! to be a slave,
Along with the barbarous Turk,
Where woman has never a soul to save,
If this be Christian work."

sympathy with both pastor and congregation, wishing success in the future in spite of any difficulties and dangers they might have to face.

Rev. Canon Davis, who was present, was called upon for an address. He congratulated the congregation on having arrived at their fifth anniversary. They could look back and thank God for his blessings in the past. He could also congratulate them on their pastor, whose object and desire was the salvation of human souls and who would preach Christ. He hoped the pew would uphold the pulpit in the work. It was easy to find fault with a sermon, and easy to unfit a man for his duties. Let the congregation uphold the minister and though his words might be weak yet some good must come. He would ask them to remember their pastor in their prayers.

The following are among the ladies who helped: Mrs. Macpherson, Mrs. Westland, Mrs. Mackenzie, Miss Mackenzie, Mrs. C. Elliott, Mrs. V. Elliott, Mrs. Stewart, Mrs. McQueen, Mrs. John Ferguson, Mrs. A. Ferguson, Mrs. and Miss Rossiter, Miss Morton.
