PEARY FLATTERED. London, Dec. 8 .- Lieut. Peary, the Arctic explorer, was tendered a banquet by the Geographical Club. Afterwards he lectured in the theater of the University of London, under the auspices of the Royal Geographical Society. A large audience received him and Mrs. Peary with the heartiest applause. The lantern views were heartily enjoyed. Sir Clements Markham, at the close of the lecture, thanked Lieut Peary in the name of the Royal Geographical Society. He said no audience in London had ever listened with such interest to an Arctic explorer as the company that evening had felt in the narrative of Lieut. Peary, who was "the greatest glacial and dog sledge traveler in the world." Sir Francis McClintock, amid loud cheers, wished Lieut. Peary success in his next expedition. The Times, Standard and other morning papers editorially praise Lieut. Peary's Arctic work, and wish him success in his next undertaking.

Mr. Stratton succeeded Mr. Willoughby, and adopted the line that has proved so exasperating to the opposition, namely, liberal quotations of recent speeches on the stump. He demanded that they should file a bill of particulars. Among the excerpts to which he drew their attention was one from a speech of Mr. Whitney, in which he said that if ordinary trustees had been guilty of such conduct they would be put in jail. (This extravagant statement amused the house.) Mr. Stratton went on to allude to Mr. Whitney's declaration, frequently made, that he religiously avoided attending the sessions of the public accounts committee. If he did attend its meetings he would be unable to make some of the statements he did make. Mr. Hardy's offer of an investigating committee is proving a great stumblingblock to one branch of the opposition campaign. On a statement that in 25 years there had been seventeen years of deficits and eight years of surpluses, the premier asked if Mr. Meacham included the expenditures on capital account in his statement. On receiving We Are Treading an answer in the affirmative, Mr. Hardy again asked if it had been the custom to include the expenditure on capital account in the statements of ordinary expenditure at Ottawa, and the member for Lennox was somewhat disconcerted when he had to reply in the negative.
