All over the city the citizens were out to examine the new lighting system. On its first test it cannot be voted a great success. The sixtycandle power Tungsten lamps are manifestly inadequate to properly light the city. Engineer Sothman recommended that the lights be changed to 100-candle power lamps, and it is likely that the change will be made at an early date. Chairman Pocock also stated that the lamps were too small, and would have to be changed. Those in use did not appear to good advantage as compared with the big arc lights of the London Electric "It's a good thing that the London Electric lights are lit," said a local

State Teachers' College is one of the ers, a church organization.

State Teachers' College is one of the foremost and probably the largest training institution on this continent; it has more than two thousand students, and over seventy professors and teachers; its trustees and officers are educational and Cookery Table—Mesdames, Business leaders in the state. These officers and teachers allow, use and advocate the reforms in spelling that have been unanimously adopted by the British and American spelling boards. Accordingly in the official publications issuing the week. from the college one finds such spellings as "practis," "instructiv," "narrativ" "equipt," "catalog," "program," "hed," equipt," "cau

After referring in detail to like advancement in methods of spelling in other prominent educational institutions, inversity the News proceeds to stimulate the pride of its Nova Scotian readers on the fact that their own normal college, in respect to improved practice in spelling, is keeping abreast of the leading normal universities of the continent.

The teachers of the high schools and academies, as well as of the public schools, are trained at the Nova Scotian Normal College, and as there is only one such institution for the province, it almost follows that it is the most important single training school for teachers in Canada. Every teacher-in-training the company's power than city life." The affirmative was upheld by Miss Violet White, Miss Gertrude Hirschleber, and Vernon Hall; the negative by Miss Dora Kingsboro, Miss Carrie Neeley and Bruce Kingsboro. The debate was judged by Miss Taylor in favor of the negative, although she complimented both sides on the excellence of their arguments. Mr. Mark Garrett, formerly a president of the society, presided.

A meeting of the A. Y. P. A. of St. Matthew's Church was held last evening in the church. A report of the incomplete in the solution, departed with a country like the country like anything will be heard for some time.
