Fish Towed Him. New York, June 23.-John Troy tells a good fish story. He belongs to Boson, and was picked up at sea by the St. John, N.B., schooner Katie C. Wilbur. Leaving the fishing boat Iolanthe off Chatham, Mass., in a dory, he says a sword fish got tangled in his buoy ine. And then the race to sea began. Troy dared not move as the craft sped on, for fear of an upset. The boat was half full of water, and to cut the line over the bow was impossible. After five hours' ride the fish played out, came to the top and breathed its last. The man crawled forward, cut the line and baled out the boat. Troy said in a joking way that he thought the fish died of worry; that was the only thing that killed sword fish. He rowed from a Thursday afternoon till Satur-
