

long life, which had been "full of good works," and "entered into the joy of her Lord."

Born in January, 1811, she was probably the oldest woman in the Aid Societies of Nova Scotia, and has been a member since 1870, the year Miss Norris visited Yarmouth and organized a Society in Zion Church. Since that time her interest in our missionaries and their work has been unceasing.

Having been deeply concerned about the salvation of the heathen from her conversion and baptism, at the age of eighteen, during one of the great revivals in the Church at Liverpool, under the ministry of the late Dr. Bill, she was glad of an opportunity to join in the work undertaken by the Aid Societies, in the interests of heathen women and children, proving faithful to the end, even after sight and strength had failed.

Shortly after the organization of Temple Church, Miss McGill transferred her membership to that Church, and took her place in its Aid Society, remaining while life lasted one of its most earnest and prayerful members.

In 1892, as an expression of their love and esteem the Society presented her with a certificate, making her their first Life-member.

She wished the Society to meet in her home in May, that she might have the privilege of joining in the service once more; but when the day appointed came, she was no longer with us. She loved the house of the Lord always, and often, during her last illness, expressed the hope that she might be able again to go to Temple.

The body was taken to the house she had so much loved, the sisters placing flowers on the casket, and after an appropriate service, the singing of her favorite hymn—"How firm a foundation," forming a part—was laid away, earthly service over.

We think of "Aunt Hattie" now as living and rejoicing in the presence of Him "whom not having seen she loved.
