

predecessor, and I have commended that such papers as may be necessary for the full examination of this subject shall be prepared and laid before you. Desirous that the expenditure in this, as in every other department of the government should be kept within due limits, I feel confident that you will gladly make adequate provisions for the support of the honour and dignity of the crown.

"The estimates for the service of the next year are in course of preparation, and will be laid before you at the accustomed period. I have directed that the utmost economy should be enforced in every branch of the public expenditure.

"My Lords and Gentlemen.

"The external peace and domestic tranquillity which at present happily prevail are every favourable for the consideration of such measures of reformation and amendment as may be necessary or expedient, and your attention will naturally be directed to that course of legislation which was interrupted by the necessary dissolution of the last parliament.

"The result of the enquiries which have been made into the condition of the poor in Ireland has been already laid before Parliament, and it will be your duty to consult whether it may not be safe and wise to establish by law some well-regulated means of relief for the destitute in that country.

"The municipal government of the cities and towns in Ireland calls for better regulations.

"The laws which govern the collection of the tithe composition in Ireland, require revision and amendment; convinced that the better and more effectual administration of justice is amongst the first duties of a sovereign, I request your attention to those measures that will be submitted to you for the improvement of the law.

"You cannot but be sensible of the deep importance of those questions which I have submitted to you, and of the necessity of treating them in that spirit of impartiality and justice which affords the best hope of bringing them to a happy and useful termination. In meeting this Parliament, the first that has been elected under my authority, I am anxious to declare my confidence in your loyalty and wisdom. The early age at which I am called to the Sovereignty of this kingdom renders it a more imperative duty that, under Divine Providence, I should place my reliance on your cordial co-operation, and upon the love and affection of my people."

HOUSE OF LORDS, Nov. 21.

The Address.—The Queen having formally opened Parliament by a Speech from the throne, their lordships met again, after a temporary adjournment, and proceeded to consider an Address in answer to Her Majesty's most gracious Speech.

The Duke of Sussex on moving the Address, expressed his conviction that the sentiments contained in the Speech were such as to preclude the possibility of all discussion. Were it not so he should have felt great difficulty in presenting himself to their lordships.

Lord Portman seconded the Address, and went over the same topics, studiously avoiding the introduction of any opinions which might disturb the unanimity of the House.

The Duke of Wellington gave his entire assent to the Address, as also to the Speeches of the illustrious Duke and of the noble Lord who had seconded his motion. "The illustrious Duke was pleased to advert to some expressions which had fallen from him at the close of the last session. He recollected those expressions perfectly well, and nothing has since occurred to make him change his mind on the subject.

The Address was then agreed to unanimously.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, Dec. 1.

LOWER CANADA.—Mr Leader wished to know if within the last six months any increase of troops had taken place in Lower Canada? He wished also to know if Lord Gosford had made any application for additional troops, and, if so, what the cause of that application was? and also when the noble lord intended to bring forward his conciliatory measures for Lower Canada?

Lord John Russell said, with respect to the first question, he could answer that a regiment had been sent from New Brunswick to Lower Canada, which Lord Gosford had been authorised to borrow. The second question he must at present decline answering. With respect to the question as to the time when any measure would be brought forward, by the government, he could state what the present opinion of the government was. Whatever they might feel bound in justice to do, Her Majesty's government were deeply persuaded that it was their duty to support in Canada the cause of those who were well affected to the Crown of this country.
