

upper portions of the arms and legs and the back were very thickly studded; the breast was less thickly covered; and on the abdomen they were sparse. The soft palate, pharynx, were invaded, and as the patient lost her voice it is probable they existed in the larynx, too. They were also to be seen on the palpebral conjunctivae, in the

Patches of skin, showing pox.