QUEBEC

Of Quebec's 14 daily newspapers, nine are group-owned, four by the Desmarais group. Two dailies are published by the Péladeau group. The other group-owned dailies are the Montreal Star, the Southam-owned Montreal Gazette, and the Thomson-owned Quebec Chronicle-Telegraph. Some 29 of the province's 41 radio stations in the surveyed communities are group-owned, including seven by Télémedia (Québec) Limitée, controlled by Philippe de Gaspé Beaubien, five by Crépault, three by a combination of Baribeau-Pratte interests, two each by Standard Broadcasting, Stirling, Tietolman, and Bushnell, one by the Desmarais group, and one by a combination of Baribeau and the Lepage Société. There are only six independent radio stations, the remaining six being owned by the CBC. Eleven of Quebec's 17 TV stations are controlled by groups, including Télémedia's two stations in Sherbrooke and Rimouski. Desmarais has a minority interest in the
