At the Russell Stock Sale 695 Main Street

When the reporter called in to see just how things were going, he found the door locked, so that he had to stay with the crowd on the outside for five minutes or more. When he did get in, he saw a larger crowd than he thought for, all buying, eagerly and quickly, boots for the whole family.

One man was just getting six pairs wrapped up when he saw a pair that would just fit him and, as the price was way down, he added it to the lot. A lady had brought her boy with a basket to carry home her purchases. Two little children were seated on the counter having boots fitted.

The gentlemen were using the stairs at the rear as seats, and good-naturedly making room for the other 100 that each was getting a fair show. Reminds me of the dressing room at the Vic after the tenth-bat," said the reporter, "boots on every side, right, left, rear and even piled in the windows. "Your windows do not look very attractive," said he of the newspaper. "Have not had a minute to do anything with them," was the reply.

"How about advertising?" "Well have to wait for the crowds to ease off, as we cannot handle any more than the present. The people soon learn genuine bargains. With this sale is the biggest thing of its kind the province has known. You get good boots at low prices at 695 Main street, while the Russell stock is being sold."

Women at Boxing Contests. American women have not taken to the boxing game as a sport to the extent that their French sisters have, although in some of the larger cities in the United States quite a number of women attend the contests at the best clubs. In Paris, however, it is a common occurrence to see hundreds of women at the boxing contests, decked out as if they were going to attend grand opera. Whenever one boxer appears at a disadvantage in point of size, he is sure to have the sympathy of the female patrons and it is not uncommon for a plucky little loser to receive a handsome present from some lady admirer.

At the recent contest between George Carpenter and Joe Jeanette in Paris there were nearly 1,000 women present and after the contest, although the Frenchman lost he was showered with presents of all kinds, also the recipient of sympathetic letters on the day following.

PLAYERS WE KNOW Word from Lynn tells of some good work on the part of two former N. B. and Maine League players, now with the Lynn club, in the New England League. KING JOINS PIPE SMOKERS Belgian Ruler Accepts Membership in a Dozen Clubs. Brussels, May 11—King Albert, who is a lover of tobacco, has accepted the honorary membership of a dozen Belgian pipe-smoking clubs.

In June a great pipe-smoking tournament will open simultaneously here, in Antwerp, Ghent and Liege, Prizes, including a magnificent meerschaum pipe, offered by the king, will be competed for, the winners being those who smoke the greatest number of pipes in a given time. No Trick to Pull "Say, the next time you're out late I wish you wouldn't blame it onto me." "What's the matter with you?" "Matter enough. Your wife called up my house at 1 o'clock the other morning to find out if I knew where you were." "I'm sorry about that old man, but you know how women are when they get worried. I don't blame you for kicking on being called out of bed to the phone." "That's just the point. I wouldn't mind if I had been there to answer the phone, but I wasn't. I was out myself that night and consequently my wife was awake and waiting for me when I did arrive."
