A (FORMER) LOVER'S PLEA (Chicago Record-Herald.)

Kindly send my letters back,
Sweet Marie;
You possess a lofty stack
Penned by me;
Since our dream of love is o'er
You'll not need them any more—
Send them quickly, I implore,
Sweet Marie.

You have filled me with dismay,
Sweet Marie;
There are other fish, you say,
In the sea;
You have made my future black;
All my hopes are dead, alack!
But please send my letters back,
Sweet Marie.

All my days I'll mourn for you, Sweet Marie; Ever fond and ever true I shall be;

When my passion was intense
I wrote letters lacking sense
Send them back at my expense,
Sweet Marie. Do not tell me they are burned, Sweet Marie; Let them safely be returned

Speedily;
Send this with them, please, my dear
On the day that they appear,
I will do the burning here,
Sweet Marie. Listen to my plaintive wail,
Sweet Marie;
Send them by the fastest mail
Back to me;
Let my plea he not in vain:

IN RUINED ABBEY

some years ago the grave of the care-ker, Jones, who appears to have exer-sed a wierd fascination over Pritchard-uring his life, was twice dug up at mid-ight, and the coffin was searched for the ill that was alleged to have been buried ith the body. No will, however, was here , it is understood, relatives of ones, the caretaker at Llantysilio Hall, ved, and some say that Jones frequently sited the abbey at night. It is thought hat he may have concealed documents on the floor of the chapter house, and is asserted that certain documents on which the claim to the millions is based ear indications of having been kept for considerable time in a damp place and inder conditions similar to those obtaining under the chapter-house floor.

Whether anything has been discovered in not is not known, but the principal claimant who some years ago asserted that her case was all but complete, has, after a long stay suddenly left the locality.

LIQUOR CASES.

Cases against Charles Lannon and Wilam Baxter, charged with violations of the liquor license act, came up for hearing a the police court this afternoon and were arther adjourned until Monday.
