Fashion Hints for Times Readers

THE ULTRA SMART SHAPES SHOW NO HAIR BENEATH THE BRIM

Small heads and large hats will be the rule next winter if the milliners are to be believed. The turbans, especially, are much larger than they seem, and they settle down over head and hair until only the brim at the back rests directly on the edge of the coat collar or collar.

Whatever being visible. After being drawn snugly down over the hair in this fashion the hat is tipped a wee bit over one eye, and the effect is decidedly rakish and audacious. The hat shown is of green tulle and green embroidery, with a velvet brim and a smart fan wing in shades of coral green and red coral.

While no definite figures are yet available," said a representative of Messrs. Thomas Cook and Son, "I am tolerably convinced that more Americans have visited Europe this summer than at any other time since the Paris Exhibition of 1900."

"I can give no better idea of the great number of visiting Americans this summer than by mentioning that we must have looked about 10,000 Americans for the Passion Play at Oberammergau alone."

In view of the fact that the average American who comes to Europe for the Passion Play must spend at least $250, Oberammergau will indirectly at least, account for an expenditure of not less than $2,500,000 of American money—probably a great deal more.

For several weeks every room has been occupied in many of the leading London hotels which cater for American visitors and the smaller hotels and American boarding-houses have likewise reaped a golden harvest.

"We have been full for weeks," said M. "Gustave" the manager of the Savoy Hotel.

"I do not remember such a rush within recent years. London is coming to be recognized more and more as the holiday centre of the world—particularly of the western hemisphere."

The representative of a London tourist agency which has hundreds of Americans among its clients estimated that no fewer than 100,000 have visited London this year.

I should try to select any hotel that she was to stop at, but should warn her that for any reason she had to spend the night in some city whose hotels she did not know, she should consult either the Travellers' Aid or the Young Women's Christian Association, for proper accommodations.

If she could not get into with either of these, I would tell her to what to do. She should be a little more than a stranger, she should be a friend.

Unforeseen circumstances brought her into a city with which she was entirely unfamiliar at six o'clock one evening. She inquired for the Travellers' Aid. There she asked where the Y. W. C. A. had its headquarters. It had none. The conductor on the train had recommended a certain hotel. She went to it, but found it most unpropitious.

So instead of taking a room there, she inquired the home of the minister of her own denomination, hunted him up, told him her situation and asked his advice. He recommended a desirable little inn and she afterwards found that the hotel she had at first been sent to was decidedly shady.

And lastly—and here I suppose I shall go against the grain of many of my readers—I should present the traveller with a little steel chapereau—a good revolve.

I think I should have it loaded with blank cartridges. That would preclude and danger to herself, and yet would be quite sufficient to frighten away anyone in the unlikely case that such necessity should ever arise.

"You would be more afraid of the revolver than anything else?"

"Well, if you insist upon feeling that way there's no use arguing. It's just a suggestion anyway, you know."

HOW TOURISTS SPEND MONEY

Britain Gets More Than $60,000,000 From Americans—All Ocean Liners Are Crowded With Travellers

London, Sept. 6.—The annual American retreat from London is now in full swing, following an invasion which, according to competent judges has eclipsed all records for the present century. It is imperative that many thousands of Americans who have been holiday making in Europe shall be back in the United States for the opening of the "fall" season. So great is the homeward rush that many who omitted to book their return passages in advance have had to adopt one of the following unusual courses:—To return by way of Canada. To put up with second instead of first-class accommodation. At great inconvenience to postpone their departure for several days.

Striking scenes are to be witnessed at the West End offices of the trans-Atlantic shipping companies which are being besieged daily by Americans clamouring for berths at almost any price. Several of the companies are experiencing the greatest difficulty in finding accommodation for their more exacting patrons, and good berths are at a heavy premium.

Nearly 5,000 people, including 1,200 saloon passengers, left Liverpool on one day this week for the United States and Canada.

The Cunarder Mauretania carried no fewer than 405 saloon, 430 second, and about 1,000 third-class passengers.

"While no definite figures are yet available," said a representative of Messrs. Thomas Cook and Son, "I am tolerably convinced that more Americans have visited Europe this summer than at any other time since the Paris Exhibition of 1900."

The Late Hector Fabre
Hector Fabre, whose death in Venice, France, was announced in the Times on Saturday was the son of the late E. R. Fabre, at one time Mayor of Montreal, and was a brother of the late Archbishop Fabre. He was born in Montreal, August 9, 1834, and was educated at L'Assomption and St. Hyacinthe colleges, and at St. Sulpice College, Montreal. He studied law with his brother-in-law, the late Sir George Blaisie Cartier, and was called to the bar in 1860. He became editor of L'Ordre, published in Montreal, and was afterwards editor of Le Canadien, Quebec (1863-6), and in 1869 founded L'Evreuil in Quebec. After being an unsuccessful candidate for the house of commons in 1878 he was called to the senate by the MacKenzie administration in 1875. He was appointed resident agent in Paris of the government of Quebec, and afterwards became an agent for the Dominion government as well, thereupon resigning his seat in the senate. During his stay in the French capital, he established a French-Canadian paper called Paris-Canada. He was a honorary commissioner to the Colonial and Indian exposition London, in 1883, and in the same year was made a C. M. G. He was a Fellow of the Royal Society of Canada. Among his published writings are "Enigmes Biographiques sur Chevalier de Lorimier" (1868), "Ecrivains Canadiens" (1868), "Confederation, Independance, Annexion" (1871) and "Chroniques" (1871).

The Bosses He is Hitting
(New York Times)

Theodore Roosevelt announces that he will give the New York bosses all the fighting they want. He will hit them hard and true. But who made them?

Mr. Woodruff was made chairman of the Republican state committee to succeed Mr. Odell at the behest of Mr. Roosevelt.

Mr. Barnes was made surveyor of the port at Albany by Mr. Roosevelt.

Mr. Merritt was appointed postmaster at Washington and collector at Niagara Falls by Mr. Roosevelt.

Mr. O'Brien was made collector at Plattsburg by Mr. Roosevelt.

Mr. Hendricks of Syracuse was made superintendent of insurance by Gov. Roosevelt.

Mr. Ward was made a member of the Republican national committee with Mr. Roosevelt's approval and consent.

Mr. Wadsworth whom Mr. Roosevelt created speaker of the assembly is a new recruit in the company of Ward, Merritt, O'Brien, Hendricks, Barnes and Woodruff, the bosses whom Mr. Roosevelt advanced on the road to power.
