Anarchist Who Attempted Life of Late King Edward Now an Alderman of Brussels — Another Birth in Royal Family of Spain Anticipated

(Copyright, 1911, by the Brentwood Company)

The relations between Great Britain and Belgium, which since the accession of King Albert have been on the mend, cannot fail to receive a severe set-back by the election of Sipido, (guilty of the only attempt ever made on the life of Edward VII.,) to the office of alderman of the city of Brussels. As such, he will be called upon to assist the mayor, or burgomaster, in welcoming foreign rulers to the Belgian capital. It may even fail to his lot to replace the mayor, in the event of the latter's absence; and were George V., to go to Brussels, he would run the risk of having the municipal welcome to the Belgian metropolis, extended to him by the very man who shot at his father and mother.

The attempt on their lives took place on April 4, 1900. King Edward, then Prince of Wales, and his consort, were on their way from Calais to Copenhagen, and while their special train was halting for about thirty minutes at Brussels, to admit of the change of locomotives, and the dispatch and receipt of telegrams through the English legation, Sipido, then seventeen years of age, approached the car and fired two revolver bullets at the very spot where the British heir apparent was seated at the window. One bullet missed the Prince's head by about half an inch, as shown by the hole in the window, while the second went wide of the mark.

Sipido was arrested, and the police had no difficulty in ascertaining that he had three Anarchistic accomplices, who had instigated him to make the attempt on the life of the then Prince and Princess of Wales, pointing out to him the fear of the Anarchistic cause that he would inspire, the world-wide notoriety which he would win by the attempt, and the necessity of doing something to help the Boers, who were then fighting for their independence in South Africa.

Of course the attempted assassination would not have taken place had it not been for the fact that despite the warnings of the English legation at Brussels, no measures had been taken by the Belgian authorities to assure the protection of the prince and princess of Wales during their brief stay in Brussels, by preventing the public, and especially people known to be affiliated with the anarchistic cause, such as Sipido, to approach the royal railroad car. To the indignation of the English people, which was shared also on this side of the Atlantic, and in many parts of the continent of Europe, Sipido was acquitted largely owing to the indifference manifested by the Belgian government prosecutors, which encouraged the jury to decide in his favor, his three Anarchistic accomplices also escaping all punishment.

Instead of re-trying him, the Belgian authorities, deaf to England's strongly worded diplomatic protests against "the grave and unfortunate miscarriage of justice," set him at liberty, of which he made use, first of all to make his way to Switzerland, and thence to France. In the French capital he became at once identified with the very worst Anarchistic element, and having had his head completely turned by the notoriety derived from his attempt to assassinate the prince and princess of Wales, made up his mind to seek fresh laurels, by an attempt on the life of some other royal personage. He made no secret of the fact that he had resolved to make the late King Leopold the next subject of his regicidal attentions, and when arrested at the instance of the Belgian government by the French police, on a warrant of extradition, he was in the act of leaving Paris for Brussels, armed with a particularly wicked looking poignard, and loaded revolver.

The Belgian government, instead of placing him on trial, committed him to an asylum for the insane, where he remained until twenty years of age, when he was incorporated in the army, without any protest by the men or the officers of his regiment. On completing his term of service, he went into business as a dealer in butter, tea, etc., and starting as a salesman, did so well that he was able to marry a girl with some money, and to establish a business of the same kind, of his own. He is now twenty-eight years of age, prosperous, and needless to add has been able to command the suffrages of all the Anarchist, Socialist and Labor element, in the district of Brussels in which he resides.

Of course King Albert's Government cannot be held responsible for his election. But in view of the fact that the independence of Belgium is guaranteed by Great Britain, which on two occasions has threatened war if her neutrality were disregarded, and which last year virtually compelled the Dutch Government to abandon the fortification of the Dutch mouth of the Belgian river Scheldt— Holland acting in the matter at the instigation of Germany —the Belgians may be said to be flying in the face of Providence, by affronting their very best friend among all the foreign powers, Edward VII. was so affronted by the acquittal of Sipido that he never visited Brussels again as long as he lived.

Official announcement has been made at Madrid of the fact that Queen Victoria Eugenie expects another addition to her family at about Christmas time. She has three children; the Prince of the Asturias, now in his fifth year, the Infant Jaime', who has just turned three, and the Infanta Beatrix, aged two. Last year, in midsummer, she gave birth to a still-born son. From now on, consequent upon this official announcement, prayers will be offered for her safety, and for that of the child to be born, in every church in Spain. The young Queen is now in England, with her husband; and her eldsest boy and little girl have remained with their grandmother Queen Christina at San Sebastian.

Old Dean Gregory, who has just been gathered to his fathers, at the age of ninety-two, after being connected with St. Paul's Cathedral, in London, first as Canon, and then as Dean, for a period of nearly forty-five years, introduced many improvements in the great Basilica of Sir Christopher Wren, entrusted to his charge. Among other things, he inaugurated electric lighting, the expenses connected with which were defrayed by J. Pierpont Morgan. His death followed by little more than a week that of his daughter, Emily Mary Batchelor, wife of the Vicar of Letcombe Bassett, and who, herself, well advanced in years at the time of her demise, was one of the earliest and most successful graduates of that school of nurses, which was formed by Florence Nightingale, after the latter's return from the Crimea, with the money which had been raised for her by popular subscription, in the nature of a national testimonial. Her earliest activities were in the parish of St. Mary-the-Less, in Lambeth, and after that, in St. Thomas's Hospital, and in Edinburgh. When she was thirty years of age, she was sent out to Madagascar, to start a smallpox hospital. There she found a state of affairs hardly conceivable, since anyone found to be suffering from the disease was driven into the depths of the forest, away from all human habitations, to live or die. Miss Gregory forced the natives to throw up some mud huts, to serve as a hospital, and to bring the sufferers thither to her, instead of driving them away. One dark night a patient died, and no one dared to bury him. But nurse Gregory exclaiming: "Are you going to let the white woman do it?" shouldered a spade, and started to dig the grave herself. This action of hers broke the spell. The panic was stilled, the man was buried, and the white nurse's reign established. Singularly enough, she escaped the disease, although she spent several years in nursing, and eventually returned to England, with her comeliness unimpaired, to wed the Vicar of Letcombe Bassett, whose vicarage comprised the garden in which, in 1714, Dean Swift wrote his "Free Thoughts on the present State of Affairs."

SUCCESSFUL MISSION.

Richibucto Review:—The mission in St. Aloysius church, conducted by Fathers Mullaney, McCormick and Guillo of the Redemptorist Order, was brought to a close Sunday evening. The Fathers expressed themselves as greatly pleased at the attendance and devotion of the large numbers who were present at every service during the week. Over six hundred persons received holy communion during the progress of the mission. They are now in Pokemouche, Gloucester county, giving another mission.

THE POPE IMPROVING

HIS HOLINESS, PIUS X., WHO IS RECOVERING FROM A SERIOUS ILLNESS

Rome, Aug. 10—The condition of Pope Pius tonight was better, and for the first time since he was taken ill recently with laryngitis which later became complicated by an acute attack of gout, His Holiness was considered as having made a step toward recovery.

The Evening Chit-Chat

By RUTH CAMERON

"No man, sir, is obliged to do as much as he can. A man should have part of his life to himself."—Dr. Johnson.

"I know why I feel so wretchedly," I heard a woman say the other day. "It isn't the hot wtather at all. It's just because I've been packing my days again. The doctor told that if I didn't get over that habit I'd be in a sanitarium in six months, and I did reform for awhile, but I guess I'm at it again."

Are you one of those unfortunate people who have the habit of packing their days?

You know what I mean, of course,—planning every hour, arranging for every moment, packing every instant full of plans.

I don't mean wholly plans for work. They may be plans for social obligations or for pleasures. It isn't the character of what you do that makes the packed day so exhausting. It's the feeling that it is packed.

It's the sense of being obliged to do this and that and to get it done at such and such a time.

It's the constant terror that one engagement will overlap another and throw the whole day out.

It's the breathless hurrying to overtake one's plans if one falls behind.

If you live leisurely and serenely, taking each moment as it comes and not trying to live an exacting schedule you will probably accomplish twice as much as you will by chasing yourself frantically through a packed day, and not be half so tired at the end.

Life is pitifully short and to those of us who have very many interests it is often a temptation to plan for each "shining hour" its duty or its pleasure and leave no loopholes for just living.

But life was not meant to be used that way, as most of us learn who try it.

The head of one of the biggest institutions of its kind in this country was once rebuking a clerk whom he considered rather too strenuous.

"Take an afternoon off now and then and just lie around," he advised kindly. "You'll be worth more to both yourself and me in the end."

The clerk, being something of a prig, reminded his employer that he had been brought up to observe —

"How doth the littlebusy bee.
Improve each shining hour."

"Yes, that's all right for the busy bee," retorted the big man, "but don't you know, my friend, the blooming bug doesn't live but one year?"

Live by a system if you like. I have no doubt those who do, accomplish most, but don't let it be a system that packs every hour and accounts for every minute and makes a slave of you.

Remember the system is for you not you for the system.

BATES-DEINSTADT

St. Stephen, N. B., Aug. 10—The hearty congratulations of an entire community go out to a popular young couple, who were married here this afternoon. The groom was Dr. Edwin Cassins Bates, of Houlton, Maine, son of Mr. and Mrs. D. H. Bates, of St. Stephen, and the bride, Miss Grace Campbell Deinstadt, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Wm. Deinstadt, two young people who are justly held in high esteem.

The ceremony was performed at the home of the bride at 4.30 o'clock, only immediate relatives being present. Rev. Thos J. Deinstadt, uncle of the bride, officiated, assisted by Rev. Geo. F. Dawson. The bride, who is handsome as well as charming, wore a gown of white satin, trimmed with duchess lace with veil of tulle caught with orange blossoms, and carried a bouquet of lilies of the valley. She was attended by Mrs. Marshall McKusick, of Vermillion, S. D., as matron of honor and the groom was supported by Dr. Frank Tarbell, of Symra Mills.

The out of town guests included Rev. F. J. Deinstadt and Miss Hazel Deinstadt, Mrs. G. O. Hannah, and Miss Helen Hannah, of St. John; Dr. and Mrs. Wellington, of New York, and Miss Rebecca Morrison, of St. Andrews.

The wedding presents were numerous and valuable and included silver spoons from the officers and fellow teachers of the bride in the Methodist Sunday school.

Dr. and Mrs. Bates left this evening for a visit to leading United States cities.

And the average girl would rather be a silly goose than an ugly duckling.

DRY GOODS FIRM SUSPEND PAYMENT

(The Telegraph).

It was announced yesterday afternoon that F. W. Daniel & Co., Ltd., 61 Charlotte street, had suspended payment. A meeting of the creditors will be held on August 22. Attempts were made yesterday to ascertain the extent of the firm's liabilities and it was said that the liabilities were about $25,000 and that the assets were of value well in excess. Those most closely concerned, however, would only say that a complete statement would be made in a day or two.

Very general regret will be felt because of the failure of this important concern. Mr. Daniel, who recently moved to the store at the head of King street, and who improved it immensely and conducted a very large and apparently progressive and enterprising business, is a man held in high esteem and though rumors concerning the company have been prevalent for some time past, it was hoped that a suspension could be avoided. It was found during the last day or two, however, that it was impossible to continue without suspension. No one connected with the firm would discuss the matter further last evening.

The city directory gives the officers of the company as F. W. Daniel president, and G. E. Fenety secretary. The creditors are said to be chiefly firms in England and Montreal, one bank and there are also several creditors in the city, though not for heavy amounts.
