GRAND TRUNK FOUND NUMBER ON PACIFIC

Chief Engineer Van Arsdol Gone to Inspect Eastern Approaches to Rocky Mountains.

Engineer Van Arsdol, the chief of the Grand Trunk Pacific survey staff in the West, has gone to Edmonton. The chief engineer will not likely spend any great length of time there, although he does not know just how long he will remain. The immediate object of his trip is to take charge of the parties now in the field inspecting the eastern approaches to the Rockies.

Mr. Van Arsdol admits that in the preliminary survey on the Pacific Coast a aged 24 years, shot and killed himself number of points have been found which yesterday. While Mr. Van Arsdol is at Edmon ton, he will ascertain no doubt the various passes in the Rockies which would be available for the Grand Trunk Pacific. That information, in conjunction with the knowledge of the coast line and all its available harbors, will simplify matters for the coming spring, and the intervening stretch of the route alone will require to be located.

The work on the Pacific Coast will go the same as if he were at the head office in Victoria. Some of the parties which he put in the field to conduct reconnaisance surveys have not been heard from since they entered upon their work, several months ago. He is therefore unable to say just how far inland the survey

There is no disposition on the part of the railroad company to leave this west-ern section of the road until the last, and the character of the preliminary opera-tions is an illustration of this fact. Mr. Van Arsdol says that the surveys across the continent were undertaken simul-taniously, and will be prosecuted as vigorously and as quickly in British Colum bia as in any other part of the country, although, as stated, there are obstacles to be encountered here, where in other places there is plain sailing.

In discussing this matter with a Times entative the other day Mr. Van Arsdol was naturally reticent as regards the actual construction of the line, but most horrible transaction."
