A special Globe despatch, of Saturday

The language of the Montreal Herald on the policy of Sir John A. Macdonald in reference to the Grand Trunk Bill leaves nothing to the imagination. Probably the Prime Minister, himself, would be the last person to deny that his conduct of that measure was influenced more by party exigencies than by the repuirements of Quebec, or the welfare of the railway corporation. But it is doubtful if the writer, who is said to be an ex-colleague of Sir John's, will not do himself and his journal more harm by the use of Bilamong prominent Conservatives last night.
