A. GILMOUR,
68 KING STREET.
Established 1841.

Two small fires broke out in residences of the city yesterday caused by defective flues, but both were extinguished before any damage was sustained.

In the afternoon a chimney on a house occupied by Mrs. Mary Gentry on Moore street took fire and the alarm was given, but before the firemen arrived the blaze was subdued and there was no further danger.

In the evening about 10.30 o'clock the alarm rung for a fire which had started near the chimney on a house owned by Alex. Mitchell, St. Paul street. Those who first discovered the fire were soon at work with buckets of water, and in a short time the flames were put out. The firemen went to the house but their services were not needed.

DAINGEROUS TO OFFEND THE KING

"It doesn't matter nowadays if a man does make Royalty angry. The King can't do anything to him."

The words formed part of a speech delivered by a non-motorist the other day. The speaker was a gentleman thought he was right; but he was making a big mistake. It is true that the King neither could nor would interfere with those who offend him the savage and cruel punishments inflicted by the sovereigns of the past on those who got into their black books.

For all that, however, if His Majesty were disposed to exercise all the power which the strict letter of the law gives him, he could make things extremely unpleasant for those of his subjects who were rash or foolish enough to rouse his anger.

ROYAL FROWNS.

A trio of daring members of Parliament recently criticized the King for visiting the Czar. They were not asked to the next Royal garden party, though all the other "faithful Commons" received invitations.

It was the general opinion that they had been excluded as a punishment. Whether this was the case or not, it is not going too far to say that the King has the power practically to shut anyone of whom he disapproves out of first-class society—the Society with a big "S."

A lady was possessed of great beauty and a famous name, but her conduct displeased the King. He let it become known that he did not desire to meet the fair delinquent again. She had been invited everywhere, and had become a Queen of Society until then; but thereafter one great house after another was closed to her. Those who hoped for the honor of entertaining His Majesty dared not countenance the lady, who was "barred."

MEAN SOCIAL RUIN.

When a lady or gentleman is presented at Court the hall-mark of high-toned respectability is, so to say, set on them. No circles are therefore forward to exclude for them.

But if the King chooses to command that such and such a person shall not be presented at Court, then full social success can never be attained by that person.

Worse than all, if anybody has actually been presented, and then falls under the Royal displeasure, King Edward can command that the presentation shall be announced as "cancelled." The former is far worse than being publicly expelled from a fashionable club.

mentary remarks passed upon it. Tonight finishes this unexcelled programme at the Bijou, and we advise all to see it. Miss Smith is changing her song today and will be heard in When You Know You're Not Forgotten.

NEW SONGS AT THE UNIQUE TODAY.

All lovers of good music will be pleased to learn that Miss Mae Power will sing "That Sweet Refrain" at the Unique for the balance of the week. This is one of the most touching songs ever written and Miss Power will be heard at her best in it. The pictures today are particularly good. The feature film is called "Dick's Story" and is one of the best dramas ever produced. The other pictures are the productions of Pathé. "The Making of a Gentleman," an amusing story of a man who tried to live according to the book of etiquette, and "A Woman's Jealousy," a very sensational drama. The scenery in this picture is very beautiful and picturesque. A young Italian becomes infatuated with an American lady who is visiting Italy. She encourages him greatly, much to the dismay of his former sweetheart. She attempts to stab the American, but she draws a revolver and ends the life of the woman whose place she has taken. In the afternoon Miss Power will be heard in a different song, and at both afternoon and evening shows Miss Outous will sing "The Saucy Little Bird on Nellie's Hat."

ROMEO AND JULIET A HIT AT HAPPY HALF HOUR.

"Packed to the doors" was the rule last evening at the Happy Half Hour, and a show that many declared was a quarter was presented. Miss Holmes sang Flirty Little Gertie, from the musical comedy The Stars, and during the evening was presented with a beautiful bouquet by a lady admirer. By request Mr. Buchanan sang In the Time of Roses. Needless to say both singers received encores. Romeo and Juliet, a 1500 foot picture of Shakespeare's great tragedy, was declared by hundreds to be the best picture ever shown in this city, and alone worth the price of admission. It should not be missed by lovers of good dramatic pictures, and will be shown for the last time today. The Music Hall Agents' Dream is a comedy and Taken By Corals is a dramatic picture, both good. Prof. Tilius sings Dream of Me and I'll Dream Of You. Sweetheart, completing an hour and ten minutes show. A pleasing innovation was the removal of their hats by a large number of ladies.

AL DILLON AT THE CEDAR.

Al. Dillon was seen in a new act last night, introducing some catchy songs and clever dancing. The picture end of the programme is pronounced by many as being the best shown here for a long while. Mr. Wallace, the new vocalist, had to respond to several encores last night. Same show tonight. Don't miss it.

GOOD PICTURES, FINE HOUSES, PLEASED PEOPLE, THE BIJOU TALK YESTERDAY.

Many were the remarks passed last night upon the excellence of the pictures shown, and many were the smiling faces that left this cosy picture house. It would not be amiss we think to say that outside of the holiday that the Bijou never had such a crowd and such a splendid lot of pictures. One in particular, Different Ways of Smuggling, is very interesting, depicting, as it does, the ways and means taken to beat the customs on the borders of France and Belgium. Beating the customs seems to be a pleasure not only in the countries mentioned but in other countries as well, so probably that is the reason everybody enjoyed it. In rich laughable comedy The Burglar's Blinde, strength-giving Pills, and A Complicated Diet some continue to please. The above programme will be repeated today.

The King has no power to remove from the Bench a judge who has angered him; but he could do so a good deal towards providing any sagging barrister from becoming a Judge or a K. C. All such appointments are nominally in the gift of the Lord Chancellor, but they are subject to His Majesty's approval.

HIS MAJESTY'S "NO."

The King is the supreme head of the navy and the army, as well as of the church. In the eyes of the law, every officer holds his commission direct from the sovereign. Such a commission, when the applicant has duly qualified for it, is seldom, very seldom refused.

But the King has the power to prevent its being granted, if he sees fit. There was a case, hushed up as far as possible, in which the son of a great family made himself rather notorious while a cadet at Sandhurst. The fact came to the King's ears, and a hint caused the offender to be sent to the colonies. The army was closed to him. It is, of course, the prime minister who selects the ecclesiastics whom he considers would be fitting candidates for mitres and lawn sleeves. But if his majesty said "No," the nomination would fall to the ground.

THE KING'S PLEASURE.

The King is absolutely the only person who can give a title in the British Empire. He can create knights or peers simply because he pleases, and can decline to confer these honors if it is not his pleasure.

All that the prime minister can do is to submit to his majesty a list of those upon whom he thinks peerages, baronetcies or knighthoods should be conferred. But the King has the right to strike out any names to which he objects, and substitute others he wishes.

Quite a number of undistinguished "Mistakes" are today lamented that they are not entitled to the title of "lord" for no other reason than that they failed to find favor in royal eyes. No honor is more coveted by a tradesman than the right to set up the royal arms and the legend "By Appointment" over his premises. This shows that the King has the right to refuse to do so.

But the privilege is only given on the King's pleasure. If he is offended, it can be taken away. And when it is taken away, it often means that the shop has to be shut up. People hesitate to deal with a man who has offended the King.

A YEAR'S FOOD FOR TRAVELERS

Some Surprising Figures From An Atlantic Line.

Cost Was $4,000,000—Beer by the Half Million Gallons and Potatoes by the 10,000 Tons.

It must be the gyroscopic attachment on the modern transatlantic liner, or else the ball bearings on which they run, which has reduced the proverbial amount of seasickness among the passengers. If it shall turn out that they do not have a gyroscopic attachment and navigation has nothing to do with ball bearings, readers are respectfully requested to supply their own explanation. That an explanation is due comes to one's understanding after only a little examination of the food figures relating to 1907, picturesquely set forth by the chief steward of one of the big liners.

Seasick passengers, no matter how many of them are carried, could not comfortably consume food of which the wholesale cost was more than $4,000,000. This is seen when one takes it into account that the total expense for coal on the same line was but $700,000, and of course none of the boilers was sea-sick and the consuming capacity is notoriously greater than any passenger, no matter how good an appetite he has.

Before noting some of the figures of food it is pleasing to observe some of those relating to beverages. Now as to champagne, which is said to be an excellent cure and for that matter a preventive of seasickness, passengers last year pulled the plugs out of only a few more than 8,000 bottles of champagne. When it comes to claret the figures jump so respectably that it is seen that a man may raise a thirst somewhere west of Suez as well as east. Of that cheerful and ruddy beverage the first class passengers consumed 12,299 bottles. That sounds pretty good, but the consumption by the third class passengers makes it appear a mere trifle by comparison, for those in the steerage joyfully drank not less than 121,237 gallons of claret, presumably of the variety known as petit bleu, about which there is a song which the Paris students sing when inspired by it.

There is something rather appalling to read that of the various grades of brandy the passengers consumed 10,641 bottles and 73,384 gallons. But these are after all trifling nips when we come to look at the figures relating to beer, for of that beverage more than half a million gallons were drunk, and it is not reported that the quartermasters had any unusual police duty to perform at that.

The recent installation of the la carte system in the restaurants of the modern liners accounts for an amazing growth in the consumption of delicious dishes such as were seldom found on even the best ships when the business of feeding passengers was exclusively table d'hôte. Restaurant diners on the liners whose figures are being considered consumed many, many thousands of partridges, snipe, quails, pheasants, grouse, canvasbacks ducks. They demanded literally many hundreds of thousands of live lobsters and crabs, of fresh little necks, blue points and soft shell crabs. They consumed such a quantity of green turtle soup that the chefs had to use up 13,407 pounds of fresh turtle in its making. Coming around to the more substantial articles of diet it is found that of fresh beef there were used 8,111,577 pounds, and of pork and veal and mutton about three-quarters of a million pounds of each. Potatoes to go with these weighed in excess of 10,000 tons, a very fair cargo in itself. The passengers seem to be doing the day with hearty appetites, as well as going to lunch and dinner in the same blessed condition. They consumed of eggs six and a half million and of calves' liver and bacon an appropriate quantity to supplement the eggs, and with their morning toast 218,503 tons of marmalade and other such sweets. As if these figures were not proof enough that Lloyd's should make a very low rate of insurance against seasickness these days it is noted that besides what smoking material passengers took on board with them, 2-32,225 cigars and packages of cigarettes were had from the smoking room steward. It is interesting to note in conclusion that while the consumption of beer, wine and spirituous liquors indicates pretty generous living, figuring on the basis of all the passengers carried for the year each passenger consumed after all only five-sixths of a gallon of such cheering beverages, while the average consumption of mineral water was a full gallon. These figures do not include 76,223 bottles of sterilized milk, which were dealt out to the children on board.
