

OTTAWA', Jan. 30 .- The house got down to solid work today, holding both afternoon and evening sessions. Both were devoted to consideration of private bills. Mr. Lancaster's amendm to the railway act, intended to provide better protection at level crossings, occupying the bulk of the time

Before this came up Mr. Guthrie (South Wellington) introduced his bill providing against the intimidation of electors by their employers. The bill proposed forbids any employer even to canvass his employes for political purposes, and applies to all individuals or ompanies employing labor in any capacity. It was read the first time . The resolution of Mr. Smith, labor leader for Nanaimo, favoring the in-troduction of an act to register union labels and to punish infringement was carried, and the bill read the first time. Smith pointed 'out that a similar act vas in force in Great Britain and in 81 of the American states. It could not injure employers, he said, as a union label could not be used on any article without the consent of the manufacturer. Judging from ejaculatory comment on both sides the house does not view with favor the proposal to grant such rights to any but incorporate bodies.

Lancaster's bill, which was Mr. shelved last session, is to amend the present railway act so that trains shall not run through thickly populated districts, cities towns and villages unless the track is fenced or properly protected. He pointed out that the present law has been decided by the supreme court to be inoperative and that trains can run anywhere as fast as the company pleases without providing any protections whatever un less the railway commission issues special order for each particular crossing. As Mr. Lancaster inadvertently worded it to the amusement of the house "they can kill you as often as they please and not pay a cent." The passage of a general law such as his amendment was, he claimed, the only remedy for the wholesale slaughter which marks crossings under the present conditions Emmerson opposed the measure o the ground that conditions were so various that a general law would be in many cases unfair. Where condi tions were dangerous the power of a remedy was vested in the railway commission, which had a power of its own motion to look after such matters. Mr. Fowler, in supporting Lancaster, criticized Emmerson and his arguments unmercifully. The railway com mission as it is now couldn't handle anything, he said, and even if it was

The rooms were soon filled with smoke and the guests were badly frightened. One of the guests gave the alarm and crawled out barefooted into the snow.

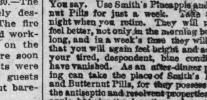

Mr. MoCready, traveller for W. H. Hayward & Co., St. John, hurried out in but scanty dress, but the fire was soon extinguished and quiet restored. During the fire some cigars, tobacco and beer were stolen from a locked closet which they broke into. WILLIAM BOYLE.
