

PURSE GIVEN TO RETIRING PASTOR

Presentation to Rev. D. Long in Victoria Street Church--Addresses by Brother Clergy-men.

Rev. David Long, retiring pastor of Victoria street Baptist church, was tendered a farewell Tuesday night the church being crowded to the doors. Two presentations were the order of the evening, one from the congregation--a purse of more than $100, and another from the choir, who gave Mr. Long a group picture, in a handsome frame.

The following city clergymen occupied seats on the platform: Rev. Neil McLaughlin, Portland Methodist; Rev. A. H. Foster, Douglas avenue Presbyterian; Rev. A. B. Colton, Brussels street Baptist; Rev. P. J. Stackhouse, Tabernacle, Haymarket square; Rev. Dr. McIntyre, Rev. Dr. Warden, of Jesus, and Rev. J. C. B. Appel, Douglas avenue Christian church. G. B. Cromwell occupied the chair.

After the singing of a hymn, Rev. Dr. Warden read portions of scripture; prayer was then offered by Rev. Dr. McIntyre. This was followed by the hymn "Jesus Lover of My Soul." Addresses telling of the great worth of Rev. Mr. Long and of the very high esteem in which he was held by all were delivered by the clergymen present, after which Rev. Dr. McIntyre, on behalf of the congregation, made the presentation of the purse. In doing so he referred to the great loss Victoria street church had sustained in the retirement of Rev. Mr. Long and wished for him Godspeed in his new field.

In accepting the purse the retiring pastor made a feeling reply. He thanked all from the bottom of his heart. He had spent nine of the best years of his life in the pastorate of Victoria street church and had ever worked for their welfare. He was proud of the fact that he was leaving the church in a flourishing condition in every way. He counseled the congregation to give to his successor the same loyal and hearty support that had been accorded him. They were to keep their new pastor always in mind, remembering himself only in their prayers.

The choir then sang an anthem and Rev. Perry J. Stackhouse then handed to Mr. Long the framed picture of the choir. In accepting this and thanking the choir, Rev. Mr. Long said that they had always done excellent work. He urged them to continue to do so and hoped they must expect some criticism that were to remember that they were not only singing for the congregation but for a higher purpose, the glorification of God.

The proceedings were brought to a close by the singing of the hymn "Blest Be The Tie That Binds, after which those present bade good-bye to Rev. Mr. Long. There was hardly a dry eye among the large assemblage.

ANALYSIS OF STAINS OF AXE ORDERED

Attorney-General Places Matter in Hands of Dr. G. A. B. Addy.

Attorney-General Pugsley has instructed Dr. G. A. B. Addy, government bacteriologist and analyst, to make analysis of the stains on the axe which Detective Killen found in Father McAuley's barn at New Ireland and which it is believed was used in the murder of Miss Mary Ann McAuley, the priest's cousin and house-keeper.

There are marks on the blade and on the handle as well. The attorney-general examined it Tuesday but would not speak of the conditions found. He would only say that he had given Dr. Addy instructions as noted and also to make analysis of stains on more of Collins' clothing. The axe was returned to the keeping of Detective Killen and by him will be taken to Dr. Addy.

FOUR CARS OFF

Accident on the N. B. Southern Line No One Injured.

Four cars left the rails--two passenger and two freight cars. The passengers escaped, but one injury. The accident was caused by a broken spring hanger on a C. P. R. car. It took seven hours to have the cars jacked up and replaced again on the rails and the train crew worked hard until the train was again ready to start. No special wreck down to the scene of the wreck.

KINGSTON DOUBLE WEDDING SPOILED

One Groom-Elect Failed to Appear, So Only One Happy Couple Were United--Accident to Missing Man Said to Be Responsible.

Kingston, Nov. 13--There is an old saying that no luck attends a double family wedding, and while no doubt hundreds of sisters have dared the saying to prove itself, the old ladies in this district are busy just now proving the saying by what happened at what promised to be a joyful occasion in the cosy residence of one of the farmers of Kingston Creek.

He has two daughters, fair to look upon, amiable and attractive, so much so in fact that one young man from Oak Point succumbed to the charms of the younger of these Kingston maidens and pleaded for the right to take her to adorn his home on the other side of the St. John.

The older sister was no less to be resisted and a Mikish stalwart, one of a name distinguished for shyness in the process, was successful in winning her favor and consent to a marriage upon the same day evening as the Oak Point suitor was made happy.

All went merry as a marriage bell. The coming event was the talk of the place and the historic old shiretown began to sit up and take notice of what was doing on the shores of the creek or more properly the entrance to Bellisle Bay.

The hour for the ceremony approached, the venerable rector appeared upon the scene, a passing glimpse had been caught of the man from Oak Point, and then a few moments of suspense before the appearance of the couple passed rapidly. Still there was no appearance. There the whisper went round that one of the grooms had failed to show up. It was true, and when this was learned for a certainty, sympathy that could not be well expressed went out to the weeping, disappointed bride.

One must copped the climax by fainting, and there was a suspicion, by the way most of the women crowded about their neighbor, that they were glad of a chance to do something.

But the man from Greenwick was not to be disappointed. His bride was expected at Oak Point, and if his hoped-for brother-in-law had failed in his duty he was ready. So was his girl and they were married, and when shortly afterward a message came from the absent groom that he had met with an accident and was in the hospital, or should be there, joy reigned supreme. Gloom went outdoors and was quickly chased by the ardent disciples of the charivari.

CHURCH WORK AND WORKERS

The London Sunday School Chronicle and other publications are vigorously discussing a volume recently published by an English clergyman, entitled "Should Christians Make Fortunes?" Such men as the millionaire George Cadbury, and the eminent non-conformist leader, Dr. John Clifford, have taken part in the discussion. A clear definition of terms is essential to any satisfactory argument and this is particularly necessary in the question referred to. What is a "fortune"? Is it not largely a relative term? What would seem a fortune to one accustomed to "the simple life," would be "straightened circumstances" to another. I should imagine that the "fortunes" under dispute mean more than a comfortable competency--mean such affairs as are enjoyed by those who are able to command the luxuries of life to the full extent of their desires.

By "Christians," I assume are meant those who are aiming at the Christian's ideal; recognize the moral limitations of human nature; the disciplinary character of the life; and the need of supernatural help to the right performance of duty. What relation to such persons hold to wealth that is not shared by others? Our problem must therefore read, Are the making of a fortune and the maintenance of the high spiritual ideals of the Christian, inconsistent with one another? To this we answer, They are not only consistent but the former ought to be a powerful influence in moulding character along Christian lines. All life is discipline. We are accustomed to think of trials, reverses, bereavements and the hard things of life as alone meriting the term. But, looked at in a broader light, the severest tests of essential moral worth and manliness are the successes and reverses that infuse with pride and self-complacency, take away the occasion for the exercise of spiritual virtues, and surround with temptations to self-indulgence and disregard of the claims of others. "How hardly shall they that have riches enter into the kingdom of heaven," yes, but in the hardness of it lies the meaning of riches. The Christian who recognizes his responsibility and, by the help of divine grace, resists the temptations of wealth, will experience a development of all the finer and nobler traits of character and enjoy the exercise of a God-given power for good. I have known such men. They were the large-hearted, broad-minded Christians men admired, not in spite of, but by means of the wealth they had accumulated. Charge them that are rich... that they do good, that they may lay hold on the life which is life indeed." (1 Tim., vi: 17-19).

There seems to be a new trend of feeling in Canada in regard to the office of Bishop, so far as concerns the age of candidates, as indicated by the fact that the best four men raised to the episcopate are young men viz., Bishops Du Vernet, Williams, Stringer and Richardson. The desire seems to be to have men of vigorous physique, high ideals and good judgment, even without matured experience, so that these other qualities may be available for the high office while physical vigor is still keen and sufficient for the tasks imposed upon a Bishop, and while the vigour of youth are still fresh before him.</
