The investigation into Section 16 matters resulted in every charge against contractors of the late Government falling through. Every engineer, from Sandford Fieming down, except Fitzgerald, agree in stating that the same principles which controlled the work on every section of the Intercolonial were applied to Section 16. The evidence is fatally damaging to Fitzgerald; from first to last, he was scheming to get a contract from Gough's hands, and would only give the contractors justice by receiving bribes. The Government have appropriated Gough's plant on the line, worth $7,000, refusing to allow anything for it.
