The Suspicious Coal Man

"YOU'RE not buying as much coal this winter," said the coal man frowning darkly at Mr. McBride.

"So you noticed that, did you?" remarked McBride with a smile of keen delight.

"Buying somewhere else?" questioned the suspicious coal man.

"No, just threw out the old 'Warhorse' that I had in my cellar and put in a McClary's Sunshine Furnace. And I'm buying one-third less coal."

"You see, McClary's Sunshine Furnace has many features for cutting coal bills that no ordinary furnace has. For one thing it has four radiating surfaces that gather up the heat and distribute it through the house. The gas chamber is built to get all the heat out of the gases which would otherwise escape up the chimney. And its four triangular grate bars release ashes without wasting fuel. And its straight fire-pot—"

"Gee! Mr. McBride," interrupted the coalman, "You talk like a McClary salesman."

"Well, you see," said the enthusiastic McBride, "I went into the furnace question mighty thoroughly before I decided on the Sunshine, and I know what I am talking about."

"Well, Mr. McBride, I must say that the Sunshine is a bad furnace for the coal man's business. But I wouldn't mind saving some coal myself, now that the cost of living has gone up so high."

"Better see the McClary agent," was McBride's parting suggestion.

IF you have an old "Warhorse" in your cellar it will pay you to see the McClary agent in your locality. You would also find it profitable to write for a copy of the latest Sunshine furnace booklet. Address our nearest office.

Mrs. Wilson entertained a great abhorrence of what are commonly called accomplishments in a woman she knew that too much of that precious time which could never be recalled, was thrown away in endeavoring to acquire a smattering of what, if known, could never be of use to the party, and what can never be well known but to a few whom nature and long practice have enabled to conquer. Yet as her niece had early manifested a taste for painting, and a vivid perception of the beauties of nature, her indignation had been indulged, and Emily Moseley sketched with neatness and accuracy, and with great reading. It would have been no subject of surprise had admiration or some more powerful feeling, betrayed to the artist, on this occasion, the deception the young man was practicing.
