Authority on insects honored by Board of Governors

The entomological laboratory on campus is now known as the Hocking Entomological Laboratory.

The formal identification, approved Friday by the Board of Governors, honors the late Dr. Brian Hocking, chairman of the department of entomology from 1954 until his death in 1974.

Currently located in a temporary building to the west of Athabasca Hall, the Hocking Entomological Laboratory will be transferred when a permanent entomology facility becomes available in the proposed building for the Faculty of Agriculture and Forestry. (The building, to be called Agriculture 2-1, has been delayed pending the approval of construction funds by the provincial government.)

Dr. Hocking, born in London, England in 1914, was an internationally-known authority on insect flight and the control and behavior of mosquitoes and blackflies.

Locally, he was a consultant to the City of Edmonton on mosquito problems and a designer of high school programs in biology.

Dr. Hocking was awarded a fellowship in the Royal Society of Canada in 1968 and was recipient of the Entomological Society of Canada Gold Medal in 1973.

He served on various scientific panels of such organizations as the Defense Research Board of Canada and the World Health Organization.

Appeal to thieves

Approximately one year ago, three banners by artist Takao Tanabe were stolen from the east wall of the Humanities building. They were not recovered.

Since that time the university has tried to find a way of replacing the banners and according to D. Haynes, chairman of the committee for the purchase and placement of works of art on campus, it is not possible to do so.

"Since the gap left by theft will be permanent unless stolen banners are recovered," says Haynes, "The Works of Art Committee is issuing an appeal for information regarding whereabouts of the stolen banners." Information can be forwarded to the University Gallery and Museum (5818).

"There is no desire or intention to press charges or to seek any punitive action," says Haynes.

"No questions would be asked," he adds. "We simply would like to put the banners back in place for the pleasure of the students and faculty."
