

MR. TWEE DEEDLE

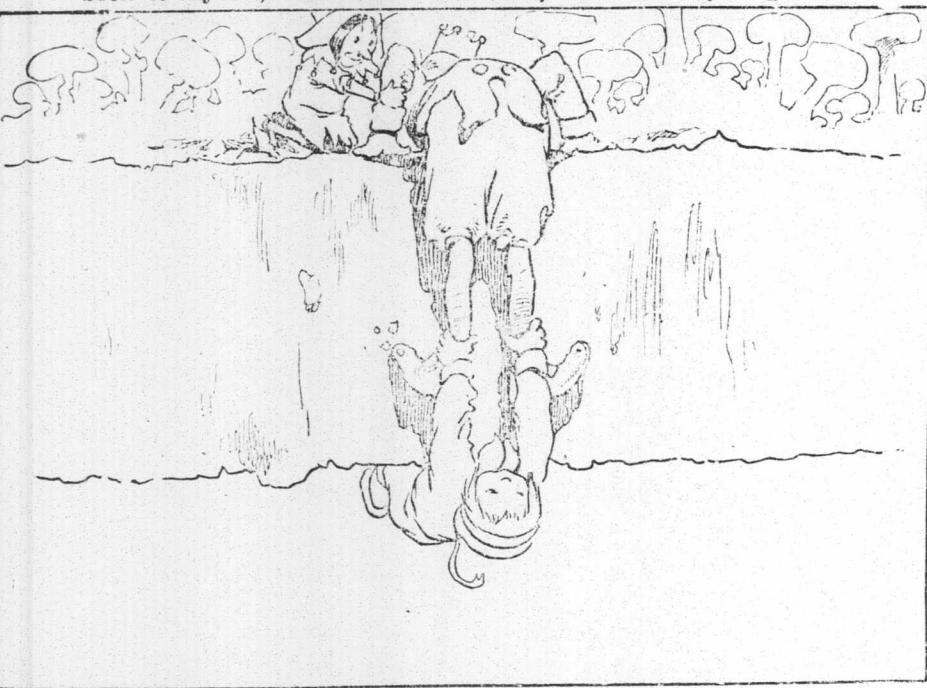

1—Before leaving the moon Dickie asked the Moon Man to show them the other side, which never can be seen from the earth. "I've never seen it myself," said the Moon Man, "but we'll try to go there."

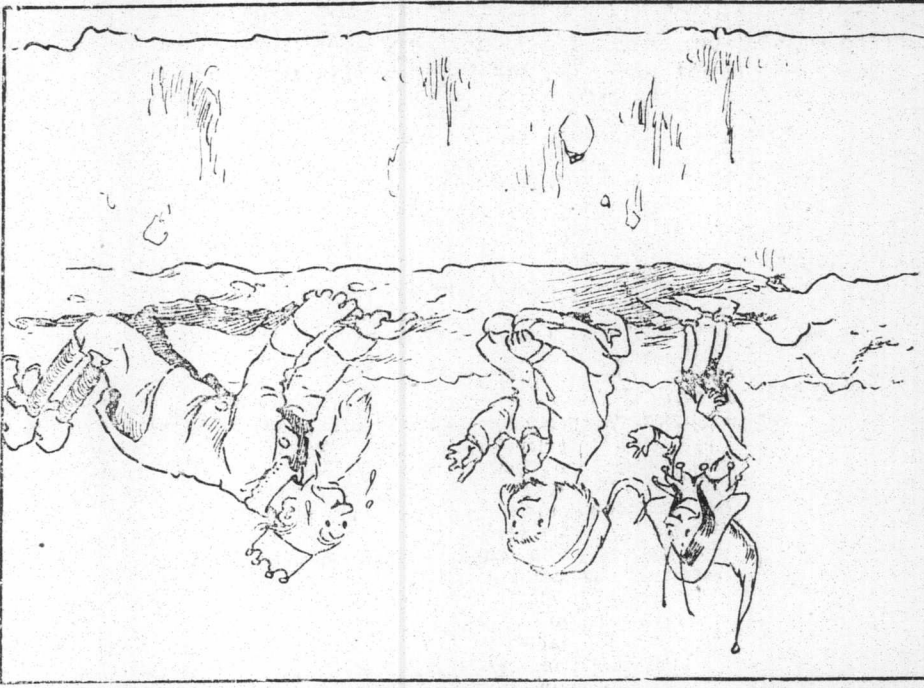

2—It seemed impossible to get on the lower side of the moon, but Dickie suggested that they might lower him over the edge.

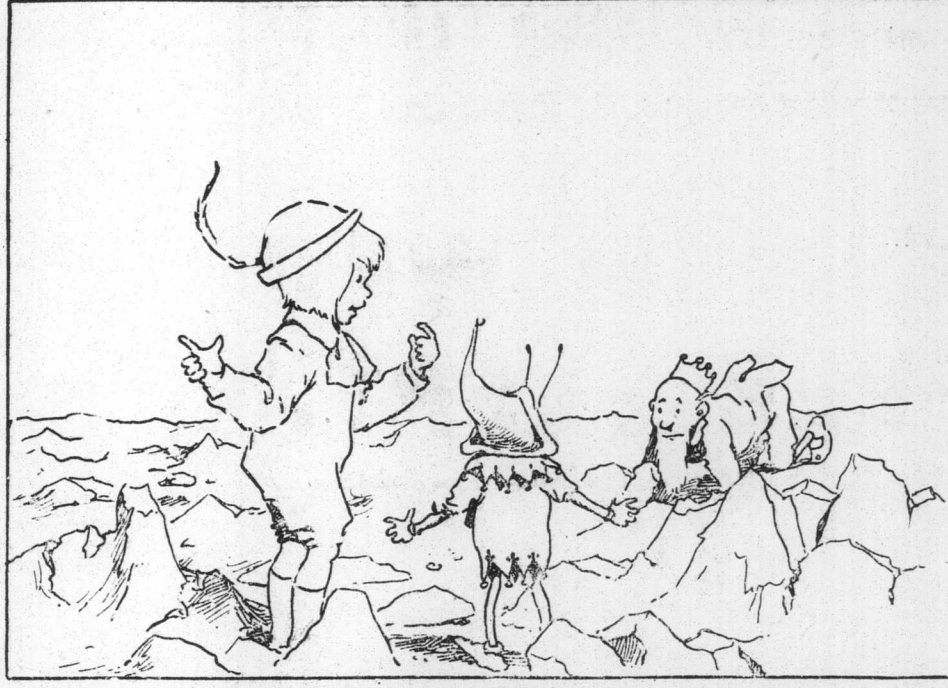

3—The Moon Man caught his legs and pushed him to the other side.

4—Then Dickie pulled the Moon Man over and he pulled Mr. Twee Deedle.

5—They felt as though they would fall off, but Dickie and Mr. Twee Deedle knew this would not happen.

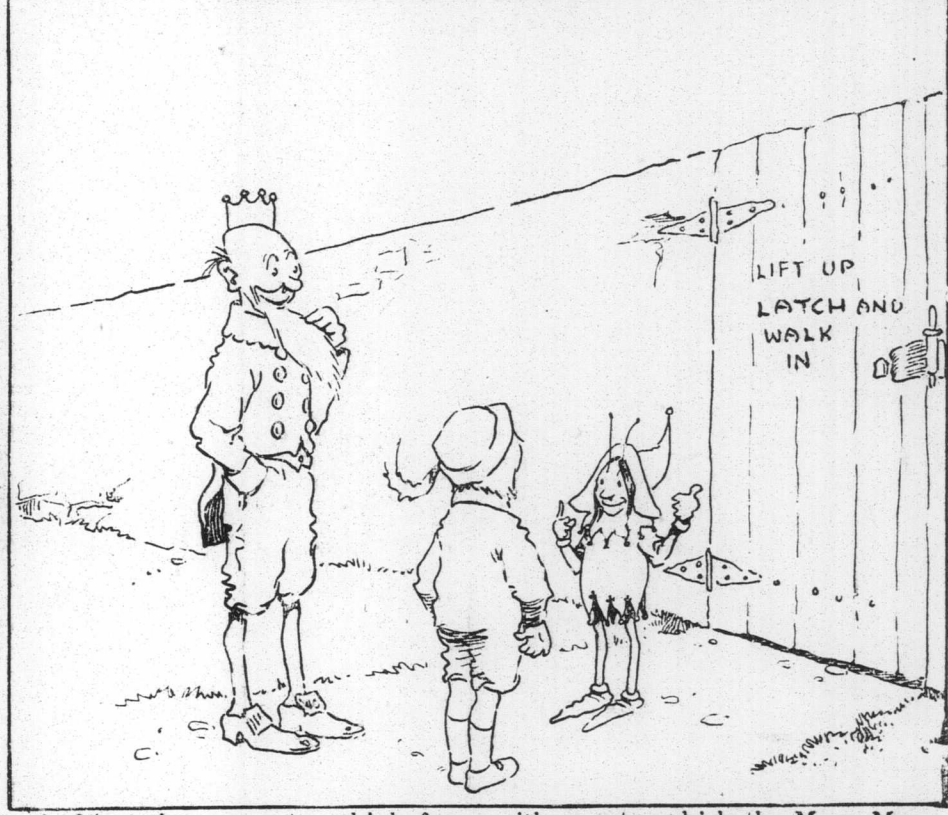

6—The Moon Man was most frightened and would not stand up until he had crawled away from the edge.

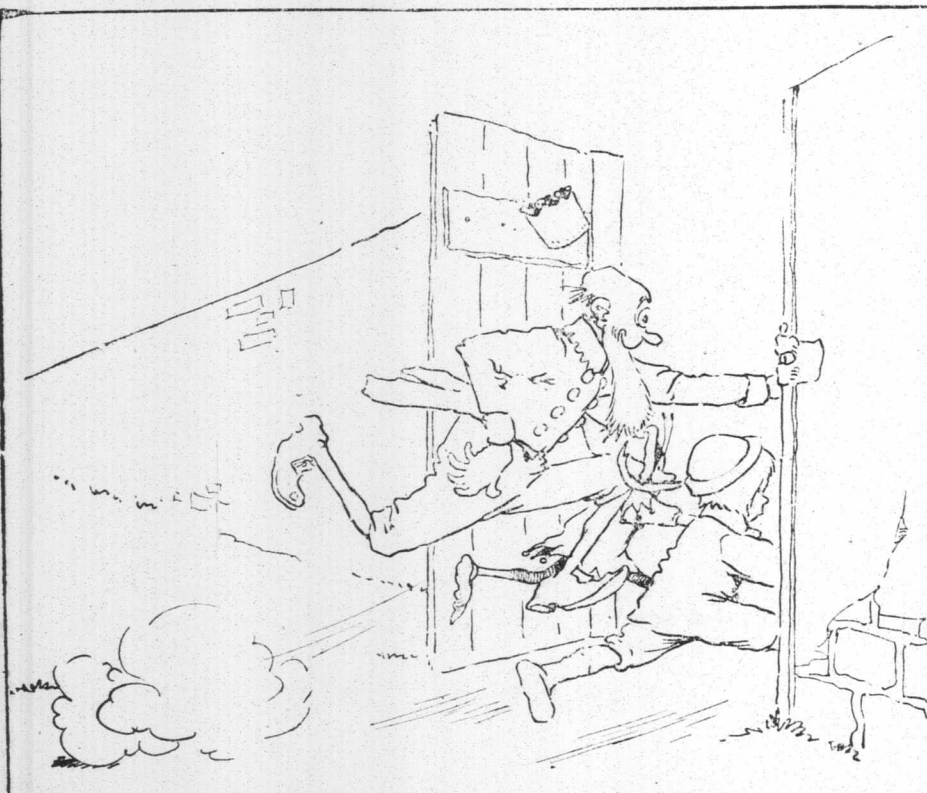

7—Seeing some bushes with large balls at the tops, like punching bags, the Moon Man struck one of them.

8—All the other bags began right away to bump the heads of the three friends and they ran away.

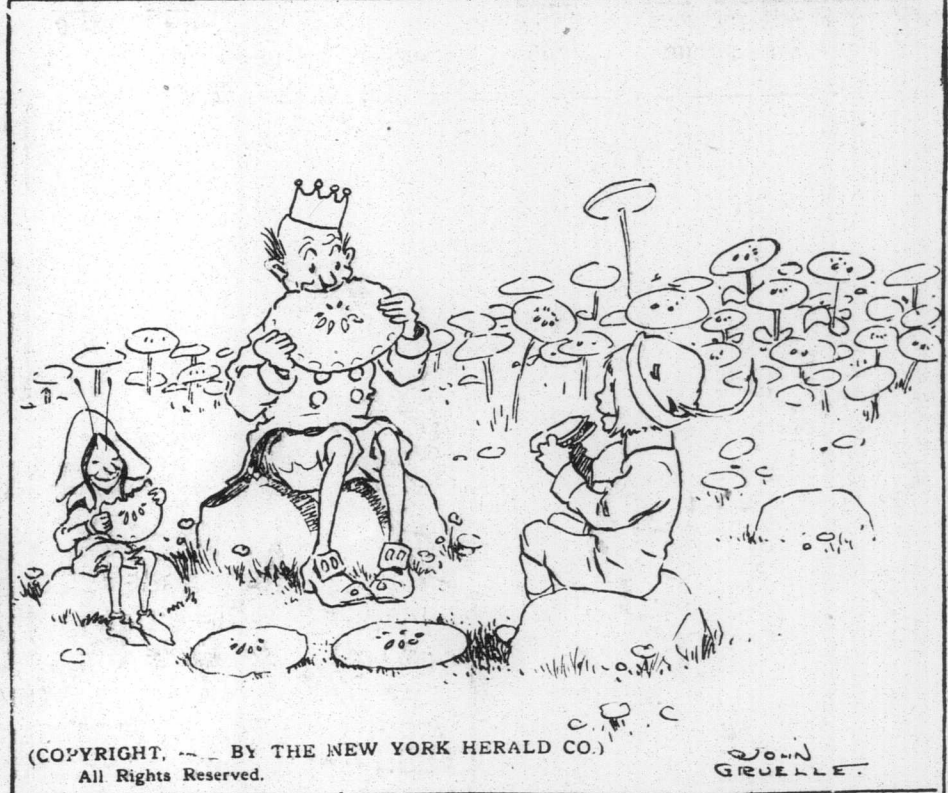

9—Next they came to a high fence with a gate, which the Moon Man was afraid to open because he thought a Jumping Jack would leap out at him.

10—Mr. Twee Deedle at last threw open the gate. With a shout of joy the Moon Man rushed through, but he was not ahead of Mr. Twee Deedle.

11—There was a wonderful field of pie plants, with real pies of all descriptions.

12—Down they sat on cushioned stones and ate till they could hold no more. "I wish I could take some of the seeds home," said Dickie.

DR. CASSELL'S

A recent letter from Fulton, the man who reads the story of a Tablets, which had brought a new world
to him, in a way
unimaginable to him
before. He had been suffering from sleeplessness for years, and he had been told that he was a "victim of sleeplessness."

Now, after taking
Dr. Cassell's Tablets,
he had found that he was no longer a victim of sleeplessness.
He had found that
he was a man who
could sleep again.
He had found that
he was a man who
could live again.
He had found that
he was a man who
could be happy again.
He had found that
he was a man who
could be healthy again.
He had found that
he was a man who
could be a man again.

always awake. No
man could equal
him in the world.
Dr. Cassell's Tablets
were the only thing
that had helped him.
I was how blessed
to have such a first dose. I had little sleep, then
the night, and that
to me than all else.
That was only a year
ago, healthy man.
