

this article. If all our existing societies found a need for their activities, and were astounded at the details which lay behind the need, the matrimonial need and its details will cast all others in the shade. The student of social conditions, as his eye wanders over the field, will speculate sadly on the queer tendency of human effort to take up the minor enterprise first, and in the very dust of its success lose sight of the essential and necessary enterprise, waiting like a poor scholar for the attention and encouragement lavished on his inferiors.—Ecclesiastical Review.
