

VIII. AUGUST hath XXXI Days. 1795.

The DAWN of a SUMMER's DAY.

THE beauteous morning
dawns forth in the east,
In cheering smiles and crimson blushes dress;
Sees as she rises from her purple
wings,
An orient influence all around
she flings:
On the young rose-bud sits the pearly stream,
And waits th' exhaling of the solar beam;

The lucid drops in pendant rows adorn
The spiry grass, the tremulous
leaf and thorn;
While from each blossom rises
rich perfume,
More fragrant sweets than from Arabia come;
Whose mingled odours gratefully arise,
And give the first breath'd incense to the skies.
