MAY 21, 1904.

SSELL.

hearty felicitations. vas or e of internationand involved the innada. The United ad that they alone had I the seals in the Behe Great Britain held Sea was open to the world. The contention in was triumphant owal diplomacy and tact l, her counsel. Russell s, painstaking and is integrity was unpular clamor. He paid the United States. On asion, after his eleva-nch, he accepted an deliver an address beassociation which met In the dispute ha ritain and the United he boundary line bea and British Guinea, a and Diffield Guina, as chosen on behalf of as arbitrator. His as to the Empire on were so much appreciwere gratefully the English Parlia 66 he was made Atbeing the first Catho office since the Reforduring the Gladstone he was created Lord vy. He was kind and nis children, joined in d sympathized in their The happiness of his en was his chief care. I exterior he had a He was particularly fortunate, especially ildren.

f England.

belonged to a deeply 7. His three sisters ligious life, and his Matthew Russell beished member of the Dublin, Lord Rusalso entered the reli-le himself was at all and practical Catho-he world as he was, markable for his puriand he had an abose conversation, His rates the fact that a ve the highest distinct e without infringing and religious obligane divine law imposes ness came upon him mition, while he was in ion of all his faculties the assizes in Wales, ome slightly indispostation it was deemed im to submit to , an n the efforts of which ever rallied. Repeatlast moment he had learned at his and fortified with the is, he breathed forth on the 10th August ixty-eighth year of his e beginning of his cahe flight of time but ady advancement until dant genius he became legal personage of his er is truly an object ymen of this country, did the very highest st without sacrificing ple, He has pointed y which others may ame height. His emi-vices are unparalleled. devotion to duty is our imitation. He terests of the Empire prove an inspiration ve to every man who honor and truth.

SATURDAY, MAY 21, 1904.

our missions we are accustom ed to devote one of the Sundays to a solemn exposition of the Most Holy, and the people are invited to visit th often as they can on that much as offer as any out on that they are able in adoration. On rday before this exposition was to take place in Dungarvan, an clesiastical student from Mount Melleray, who was spending his vacation in the town, with his mother, was occupied with the sagristan in corating the high altar with innumerable lights and flowers, and wishing o know if the six tall candles were straight, came to my confessional, where I was busily engaged, and askme at all ?" ed me to go and direct him. companied him at once to the predella, and finding that some changes necessary, I bade him go hind the reredos, remaining myself in front of the altar. He inadvertently pushed one of the heavy six foo candlesticks over its step, and it came thundering down on my head, knocking me backward to the foot of the altar steps, and inflicting a serious wound on my forehead, to be followed by an ugly swelling. I was insensible for a short time and was bleeding profusely. A doctor was rogue of a fox" who had destroyed sent for who dressed the wounds, and all her cherished poultry, yet I was able to return to my confesno claim to belong to that breed or sional after an hour's delay. Thepoor generation. fellow who was the innocent cause of the accident, when he saw what he had done, then and there made a vow. that he would endeavor to fill my place if he were accepted, and though he did not succeed in killing me, yet instead of returning to Melleray, he applied for admission as a novice, and in the course of time became priest among the Missionary Oblates of Mary Immaculate. . . .

homes.

years to come.

Some conversions took place in this Catholic town of Dungarvan during our missions there. I refer my readers to a notable one which I have recorded in my essay on "Remarkable Conversions." As a rule we did not seek to make many converts among those who were outside the one true Church; we felt that our chief vocation was to evangelize the poor and to preach the Gospel to the lost sheep of the House of Israel, or the household of Faith. The time of a mission is generally both tooeshort and too hurried to enable those who are engaged in it to impart sufficient instruction to such as are seeking aiter the truth. But we do not neglect to introduce such seekers to the priests of the locality, so that after our departure the little spark may be kindled into a bright light and burning flame. I do not apply these remarks to the admirable and fruitful missions to non-Catholics which are at the present day so much in vogue, and which are doing so much good especially in the United States of America. . It will be easily understood that these non-Catholic mis sions are not preached because they are not needed in Catholic Ireland. . . .

I was deputed to give a catechetical instruction to the children every day, except Sunday, at midday. During time the other Fathers, after taking a slight lunch in the sacristy, would walk in the large grave-yard outside the Church, and recite their Vespers and Compline. One day when Father G--- was thus walking to and fro, reciting his Vespers, . respectably dressed country woman seated herself on one of the large seated herself on one of the flat stones, with the evident purpose great mission going on. So I went proviso that those belonging to into the chapel there abroad, and ther one or the other must be in the when I went round I read the names plural number, they were obliged to plural number, they were obliged to of the holy fathers over their boxes, bring a poor lunatic from Cashel, for I am a good scholar, thanks be otherwise the Anglican chaplain to God, and there I saw Father Fox. | would have been deprived of his sa O wirra, wirra, what will become of lary. We were informed that Father G.- tried good man was actually without any console her and told her to go with stipend for his exacting labors nearly a month, but on the arrival o him, as the children had just left the the insane woman from Cashel, havchapel and that I must have returned to my confessional. Just as I sat ing again two souls to look after his salary once more amounted down I saw Father G- pulling forthe same sum of money as was ward towards me the good woman luctantly given to the priest who had whom he had in tow, having hold of her clock; and when he came close to several hundreds of Catholics under me he said, "Father, will you speak the same ruof who looked to him for spiritual aid and consolation. to this poor woman. She is breaking her heart, because she thinks she this is but one specimen of the harsh has cursed you." I soon sent her and tantalizing manner in which our home happy by telling her that co-religionists were treated under the though I bore the same name as "the reign of Protestant supremacy.

.

I have already mentioned that in going from the Cathedral to the col-. . . lege we had to traverse the main street of the town. On one Satur-As a proof of the vast crowds who day during our mission the horse fair were gathered together to take part was being held in the street. As ,I in our first mission in Dungarvan I was endeavoring to thread my way need only state the following fact through a crowd of men and horses, It is our custom to invite those wh a young farmer,-who was exhibiting come for the renewal of their baptisthe paces and descanting upon the mal vows at the close of the exer points of a mare which he was anxicises to bring with them a wax canous to sell, shouting out that he dle, which is held in the hand during would not let her go under twenty the baptismal promises and is after pounds,-saw me, and rushed wards placed in a basket at the chawards me. Catching hold of me by pel door as the people retire to their the cloak with one hand, while grasp-They are recommended to do ing the rein of his mare with this, not only as a suitable offering other he insisted on my blessing her to the altar, but also that when they I foresaw that I would be his see candles burning there, either at soner for an indefinite period if I did Mass or at Benediction of the Blessed not do something to please him, and Sacrament, they may be induced to as there would be no harm in blessrenew their obligations in the preing a horse any more than others of sence of their Lord and Master. But God's creatures, whether animate or the fact to which I would draw your inanimate, I went through some sort attention is that when we returned of a ceremony, more visible than auto preach another mission at Dundible, I believe, and I was immedigarvan, at the end of three years, ately released. All eves were turned there was still a large supply on me, and I must confess I was not altar candles in the sacristy, though sorry to be free again, for the mare the parish priest was noted for his who was not yet broken in was danclavish display of lights, especially for ing and prancing perilously near to Benediction. He assured me that he me. I then succeeded in forcing my had not purchased a pound of candle way to the college gate, but while during the intervening period and doing so I heard the young farmer's would not need to do so for some stentorian voice as he cried out, asked twenty pounds for her a while

. . .

I :invite you now to accompany m to the ancient city of Thurles, the residence of the Archbishop of Cashe and Emly, where the Diocesan College is situated, and where there are two convents, one of the Ursulines, and the other of the Presenta tion nums. At the time when we gave a great mission there some years ago, these convents were called the two greenhouses, because the An amusing incident took place two superiors were sisters of the during our first visit to Dungarvan. name of Green. As these orders of women are both enclosed, and there was a considerable space between the two convents, there was no possibility of the Rev. Mother Green of the Ursulines visiting her sister, the Rev. Mother Green of the Presentation nuns, nor vice versa, so they adopted safely say that we could not accept a code of signals by which they could hold communication with each other every morning and evening. The parish was widely extended, and there had never been a mission there before, and as the Archbishop wished rocking herself from side to side with that every parish should have its Lent or the month of May, but as the hood of her cloals partly drawn own mission, when he found that the over her head, and was sobbing au- throngs which crowded around us be-were compelled to decline a far greacame overpowering, he restricted our dibly. When he had finished his Vesfaculties to those who belonged to pers he stopped in front of her and the parish of Thurles. But the tricks said : "What is the matter, my good which the would-be penitents played woma ? You seem to be greatly in order to get to confession hin She looked up at troubled." both varied and amusing. We had and replied : "Oh ! wirra, wirra, Faannounced that no one coming from ther what'll I do at all? I've com the Union Workhouse would be kept mitted a sin that I don't believe the waiting, as it was not always easy great God in Heaven can forgive me for them to obtain permission to ge "O don't say that," said for it 1" out, and when we had repeated ap-Father G- "But tell me what you plications to the effect that they be did, and perhaps I can help you longed to the Union, we remarked to "Well, then, Father, I'll tell you the one of the curates that the Union whole truth. I live about twelve must be very large, but he told us miles from Dungarvan, at the foot that these tricksters belonged to the of the Commeraghs. I have a good union of parishes under the one Dean, and they had no connection farm there, and I used to have a great many cocks and hens, and I was very proud of them, God forgive with the Workhouse at all. So one morning not long ago when the girl who went out to mill the cows came back to tell me that a With regard to the Union Workrogue of a fox had broken into the house, we converted half the Proteshen house and had killed all my bear house, we converted han the transformation of the set were only two there who were not Catholics, and one of those applied for reception into the Church. As tiful cocks and hens except one old cock that was no good, I up and cursed all his name, breed and gene-ration to the end of time. I same for reception into the Church. As into Dungarvan to-day to do my mar-keting, and when that was finished I said I would do something for my poor soul, for I knew I was in mor-tal sin, and I also knew there was a

THE TRUE WITNESS AND CATHOLIC CHRONICLE.

oi.

the

fo

re

Bu

to

the

Whe

fre

which

included either

was to have escorted us through the village, but through some accident it was too late. But we had the full benefit of its noise, if not its melody while we were at dinner in the presbytery. The instrumentalists had five drums and two fifes, and these had been borrowed from friends in Clonmel. As not one of this queer band had the least knowledge of their aim was to compensate for their ignorance by making as much noise as they could. A few days afterwards one of the drummer who was an altar boy, told me that to his great dismay he had broken his drum, and being bound to return his instrument intact he was at loss to know what to do. Later seeing that his face had brightened up I asked him what he had done about the drum, and he told me that he had killed a kid and had had the skin dressed, so that he obtained sufficient leather wherewith to repair the accident. On asking him how much he would have to pay in restitution for the hid that he had stolen, he replied that it would only amount about half a crown. Kids and goats were evidently cheap enough in that part of the world. There are few subjects of more importance which claim the attention titution. Penitents who have made themselves amenable to the eternal law of justice are sometimes so completely dejected by the apparent impossibility of restoring what they have taken or kept unjustly, that they are often kept away from the reception of the Sacraments. The confessor on the other hand is bound not only to make himself thoroughly adquainted with all the circumstances of the theft or injustice, but also with the capability of the penitent to compensate for what burdens his conscience. Thus if it were the government that had been cheated he might suggest that a certain number of postage stamps should be purchas ed and then destroyed; if some individual had Leen injured to a comparatively small degree, or the means of the person bound to restitution were but limited, he might enclose some postage stamps in an envelope and have it directed to the person for whom it was destined. The latter may wonder from whom the stamps have arrived, but he certainly will Care not throw them into the fire. should be taken in such cases to keep an exact account of the amount restitution which is being made. 11 some one who is tolerably well lanows that he is bound to restore to the last farthing, he may do so directly himself, or as often happens he may ask his confessor to perform this duty for him, as no one is bound to accuseh himself. I have often been requested to render this aid to those who were in trouble, but I alway insisted on certain conditions. First that the penitents should give me the name of the person to whom the money was due, and secondly that he should give me his own name and direction, so that I could demand a receipt from the creditor. whether the debt was woped out in installments or in full. But in spite of all precautions the confessor may sometimes find himself to be the recipient of more abuse than gratitude In one of our missions I received large sum of money to hand over to the leading merchant of the town. upon this gentleman and handed to On the day after the mission I called him a roll of hank notes After counting them over he refused to in a loud voice, in the hearing of his clerks, that I had kept ten pounds for myself. I managed not to lose sation. but left his office, quietly rish priest of all that had happened. The P. P. was so indignant about it getting to confession, excepting, where that he immediately called upon this gentleman, and finding him to be obdurate in the matter, he threatened to denounce him before the congregation, if he refused to send me both the receipt and an apology. This of course he promised to do, and he kept his word that same evening. heard no more on the subject except and that the news of his scandalous havior, spreading through the town and neighborhood, materially injured his business. If restitution has to be made to some person or persons unknown, or beyond reach, then and then only can the immutable law of God be satisfied by means of cha ritable offerings, or through prayers One of the most notable instances of faithfully discharged restitution through my intervention occurred at one of my missions where the person who accused himself being then in re-

Branch 26 of the C.M.B.A. of Cana da entertained their friends and patrons to a very pleasant and successful enchre on Wednesday evening the 11th instant. As it was an nounced this would be the last euchro given by the Branch for the present season, a large number availed themselves of the opportunity of finishing the season with the members of good There were six very beauold "26." tiful prizes, the winners being :

Ladies:-1st, Mrs. Jas. Callaghan 2nd, Miss Margaret Reynolds; 3rd Miss Annie E. McDonagh.

Gentlemen .- 1st, Mr. Owen Tansey 2nd, Master Heffernan; 3rd, J. A Hartenstein.

After the prizes were distributed refreshments were served and the gathering broke up with cheers for the officers, members and patrons of Branch 26.

TEMPERANCE NOTES,

CARDINAL MANNING. -Recalling the sturdy spirit of antagonism to and judgment of those who are all the influences which gave sway to preaching missions than that of resintemperance, manifested by Cardinal Manning during his long career, contemporary says :

> "There are many people who believ, in temperance as an abstract proposition. They would like to see cor as regards drink improved. ditions They would like to see liquor loons lessened, the evils of the drink traffic minimized, the power of the brewers and saloon-keepers curbed, but they fear to take active measures for the attainment of such a much desired end. They do not believe they say, in trying to legislate men into temperance. They do not think that temperance men should be engaged in such a business as that o seeking by legislation to Letter conditions. Conventions, societies, processions, resolutions,-these are all right; these are perfectly harmless.

> But nothing further, for them. "Not such a man was Cardinal Manning of England. He recognized was Cardinal that while the basis of the temperince movement has been and must be individual total abstinence, yet there was another and public side to the question. Speaking on one occasion against the pernicious legislation with regard to public houses then in force in England, he said : 'There are some remedies which are political, and as a great part of the evil is caused by Acts of Parlia ment and by policy, we must meet them in that sphere too.'

ANOTHER VIEW. -Sir Wilfrid Lawson illustrates some of the peculiar features of the drink-habit in the following terms. He says :

"Shakespeare wrote a grand temperance sentence long ago when he said, "Honest water nover left man in the mire." That was paraphrased by Samuel Morley as folows: "If you want to be healthy, wealthy and stout, have lots of cold water within and without." This shows how gradually we are getting rid of all the old illusions and deluabout alcohol: and when they are all gone from the public mind, the course will be quite clear for us. Nobody can get up honestly and give me a receipt for them, and said that alcohol has made him richer healthier or happier. Three men went into a public house on a tain cold day. The first said, "Landmy temper at this outrageous accu- lord, give me a glass, I am so cold." The next, running in quickly, said "Bring me a glass, I am so hot." While the third, an old Quaker, who was sitting by the fire, said, "Landlord, bring me glass because I likes That is the real reason why people take alcohol-because they like it.

the Sisters of the Holy Childhood who were turned out at the end of February. On the 5th of the preseat month (April) the school was reopened with a staff of Catholic lay mistresses. The Sisters had closed with an attendance of 150, and exactly 149 of these girls came back when the school was reopened. Meanwhile the commune had been busy preparing a school for those in town who the government declared were pining for secular education. A mistress was engaged, and she opened her class with a rush of one scholar, whose education will cost the com mune about 2000 francs a year. This is an excellent example of economy of the secularist.'

*3

SIGNED HIS NAME IN IRISH,

There took place recently an interesting dispute between Thomas Mac-Donagh Mahony, a Justice of the Peace, and the authorities of Dublin Castle. It occurred to Mr. Mahony that the native language of Ireland was as good as that of England, if not better, for signature to an Irish official document, and thus to all documents and warrants he signed his name in the original Gaelic. He soon received a reminder from the Lord Chancellor of Ireland that law and custom alike demanded that Mr. Mahony's signature should be in English, the official language. Mr. Mahoney refused to obey, and Lord Chancellor Gibson removed him from the magisterial bench.

"Usage prescribed in such docu-ments," said Mr. Mahony, in a second letter, "demands that my warrants should bear the ordinary signaure of the Magistrate, and as I am in the habit of signing my name in Irish, I shall not be justified in using any other sort of characters."

The Lord Chancellor again wrote that expedition and convenience both demanded the use of the English language, and fortified his position by a statute of the reign of George II, prowiding that all documents should be written in English.

In reply Mr. Mahony reminded the Lord Chancellor that at that time Ireland had still a Parliament . of her own and could not therefore bound by any laws which did , not apply to that country. , He also asserted that the use of French was permitted in Canada, notwithstanding the statute of George II., and confessed his fear that his signature was refused because it was in Irish.

MASS AT THE FAIR.

On the 14th April, Mass was celebrated in the chapel of the Philippine reservation, on the World's Fair grounds, in St. Louis. Father Paimes was the celebrant. He will have spiritual charge of the Filipinos during the fair. In this connection we have the following interesting item

"General Wilson, the Philippino Commissioner to the Wotld's Fair, is preparing to make ample provision at an early date for Father Palmes' con venience and comfort among his own people in the reservation. ther Palmes is a Viscayan by birth, and belongs to the diocese of Bishop Rooker. He is a highly cultured gentleman and has been a priest for twenty-five years. He speaks his native (Viscayan) tongue and also Spanish and English."

FATHER ROSSI DEAD.

At Campomorone, a suburb

opino Judge.

istice of the Supreme hilippines Islands is a laimed that "his Ames on the bench regard the greatest and best ery pertinent question rs that they have ever o who educated such a nerally forgotten that ad universities in their longer than America. onsidering all people, ited States, as barbaunlike the old Roman vilization. All were outside the pale inion; yet Rome has ished and those very re been the ancestors intelligent and learned ter number than we could accept. The immense crowds that assembled at saying that I should inform the pathese missions included thousands in many instances that had no chance of we received help from the surrounding secular priests who were all charitably disposed to each other, but the people came to listen to the sermons, and to take part in the impressive ceremonies, and even though they might not have received the Sacrament of Penance, they returned to their distant homes jubilant happy. The village of Ardfinan is one of the lovely localities which I shall always look back to with delight. There is a union of three parishes there. Ardfinan, The Grange ago, but I will not let her go now double that sum, for the Holy Father ther he succeeded in driving his bargain or not I cannot tell, all I can say is that when we returned to our work in the Cathedral after dinner

there was no sign of either horse or man, and my curiosity was not sufficient to induce me to make enquiries.

lest I should be detained for , any

. . .

quently asked for than in the county

Tipperary, and the adjacent counties of Waterford and Limerick. I may were showered upon us. At the com-mencement of Advent we generally prearranged our programme for the ensuing year. The majority of de-

There was no part of Ireland

which our services were more

one half of the invitations

mands for missions

similar benediction ceremony

for a penny under forty pounds

(meaning me) has blessed her.'

and Ballybacon, the paster and two curates live in the first named of these places. The greatest enthusi-asm prevailed in the extensive neighborhood on the occasion of our long-anticipated mission: the Ardfinanites were now to share in privileges which

The Paris correspondent of the Lon don "Tablet" tells of an incident that will suffice to show the under current of sentiment in France, and the troubles the government created for itself. He says : has

"It is all to no purpose that English correspondents endeavor to make out that the people do not care for the schools of the congregations, or the schools of the conjectation, A fact like over the world, will combine to erect the following is worth a whole col- a memorial to his honor. He certhe following is worth a whole column of protestations on the part tainly had a long and useful career. of those who have a purpose to serve in singing the praises of M. Combes and his politique. At Mery-sur Oise there was a school for girls which for fifty years had been in the bands of Genoa, in Italy, vanced age of eighty-three years, the Rev. Pietro Rossi, a member of the Congregation of Priests, an Order founded by St. Vincent de Paul. had held the chair of dogmatic theology in the Collegio Brignole Sale Negrone, via Fassolo, in Genoa, from its endowment, in 1854, by the Marquis Brignole Sale Negrone, whose daughter was the charitable Duchess di Galliera. The object of the college was the training of young men for the priesthood, and Father Rossi saw them by hundreds ordained and leaving their Alma Mater for every part of the world One of them was Mgr. Vincent Bracco, from 1873 to 1889, Patriarch of Jerusalem. The late Bishop Wigger of Newark, was among his early students. Father Hecker, of the Paulists, was one of Father Rossi's particular friends. The students of that institution, who are scattered all This year he celebrated the golden jubilee of the institution with which