

You Pay Double Taxes

every time you buy merchandise produced outside of British Columbia. Every dollar spent over the counter pays its quota to some treasury. When you buy imported goods you are reducing the amount of taxes paid by trade to your province. You are compelled to make up the difference. You pay twice—once to a government in which you have no personal interest, and again to your own public treasury. You do not do so when you buy the products of farm and factory
