It was 45 years age Nov. 17 that Ferdinand de Lesseps, the builder of the Suez Canal, in company with Empress Eugenie of France, began the voyage on the Aigle through the canal followed by 68 vessels of various nationalities. It took them three days to reach Suez, at the eastern end, and the canal was then formally opened to the maritime trade of of only 22 meters. But the canal at once be-Indian wheat could be drawn on by Europe for bread, for, on account of the tropic heat and the weevil, wheat could not be shipped by way of the Cape. The canal company charged 10 francs per ton toll. Though in 1870 500 vessels used the canal, it falled to pay expenses and continued to run behind for some years. The canal from the beginning was neutralized, but in 1888 representatives of all the principal nations of Europe met in convention and formally ratified the neutrality, Great Britain reserving the right to declare that this neutral-

It has an average depth of 9 meters and a width of meters at the hottom between Port Said and the Great Bitter Take, Citizens of Deseronto Wish Col. E. Had they not been made within the last ten years, the Panama Canal would now take from the Suez Canal a great bulk of its trade. The Suez can now pass great steamers drawing a depth of 28 to 29 feet of water and with their searchlights they may easily navigate the canal at night and pass each other at many points. The passage is now effected in 16 hours. The improvements entailed an expense that caused the French Canal Company, a large number of whose shares were held by the Khedive of Egypt, to lose control of the canal to the British Government. The canal toll is now $1.26 per ton, the same as that of Panama. In 1912
