

BLACK HAND TACTICS

Victims Fear to Testify Against the Operators—No Central Organisation.

Evidently the Black Hand has reached as far west as Winnipeg, for Mayor Ashdown has received a very threatening letter, says the Mail and Empire. Indeed, from known facts one might fairly deduce unusual activity on the part of this baleful brotherhood in the far west of Canada, because there Italians in large numbers are engaged or will be engaged, in railway construction work. That the mayor of Winnipeg is in any particular danger is not likely, and we interpret the threats against him as a neat way for the bandits to tell their countrymen they are "on the job" and that assessments must be promptly paid up.

Speaking generally it may be said that the dreaded Black Hand has spread all over this continent. Wherever there is an Italian community, there is the specter of the organization. He may be a member of the community himself, or he may be a stranger. So long as he is wicked enough or cunning enough he can live at ease supported by his unfortunate countrymen. The fact that any one hears little about the Black Hand in any given Italian community may be evidence that it is prosperously at work. Dynamite outrages and kidnappings are by no means the surest sign of Black Hand strength in any district, for at bottom the organization is not founded with a view of murdering people. A murder may signify a failure to collect blackmail or it may be wantonly committed in order to have a terrorizing effect on intended victims of blackmail.

The Weekly Assessment
An American writer on immigration who has paid particular attention to the Black Hand organization is Mr. Broughton Brandenburg, and he thinks that the outward activity of the Black Hand is the most sign that it has fastened itself securely on the community and is collecting blackmail without the necessity of violence. He testifies to having seen it at work among gangs of Italian navies. On pay day an Italian turns up, and goes round among the men apparently begging. His exactions are, usually small, perhaps amounting to 50 cents from each laborer. Mr. Brandenburg estimates that there are 150,000 Italians in the United States who have submitted themselves to the Black Hand and are paying weekly assessments for their exemptions from worse evils. As to the membership of the organization, it is impossible to hazard a guess, as new branches spring up constantly, but our authority says that in New York there are 4,000 young Italians who live in affluence, yet who have never worked. He supposes all of them to be members of the American Mafia.

The Rebel and the Lesson
Why Black Hand outrages are common at certain seasons of the year than at others is explained by Mr. Brandenburg. When the Italians are all at work, and earning good wages, they more readily yield to the threat of their oppressors, and pay their weekly ransom without much demur; but in the winter time, when work is scarce, and the laboring Italian is driven to the most desperate shifts to support his family, he is often forced into rebellion by the cruel exactions of his task master. Than it is that he will refuse to pay, and perhaps he may try to drive a stiletto into the carcass of his collector. For a few days nothing happens; the Black Hand waits till the whole colony knows of the trouble. Then suddenly the blow falls. The lesson has been taught, and some of the holder spirits who had lifted their head rebelliously once more bow their necks to the yoke.

Atraid to Inform
To exterminate the whole blood-thirsty order on this continent would be a simple matter if it were not for the reluctance of victims to turn to the police and bear witness against the blackmailers. From Rome the Italian has brought the conception that it is dastardly to inform on the ruffian who attempts his life. The proper thing to do is to become an equal ruffian and stab the enemy. This sentiment makes the work of the authorities in Black Hand centers extremely difficult. More than this is the absolute terror the gang inspires. On several occasions the police thought they were on the threshold of discoveries that would brood the conviction of whole broods of these ruffians; but at the last moment the material witness retracted his former confession, and chose imprisonment for perjury rather than the fate that he feared should be openly proclaimed himself an enemy of his tormentors. On at least two occasions mentioned by Mr. Brandenburg, the Black Hand has given the "death signal" to the witness in the box, with the result that there has been an infant and complete withdrawal of damaging statements, to the disgust of the police and the indignation of the judge. But increasing the misfortunes of the victims by sending them to prison for perjury is a poor way of exterminating the band.

No Central Organisation
In time, no doubt, the system that is being pursued in districts where the Black Hand is known to be strong, the hiring of special Italian detectives, will win the day. Even though the convictions they are able to secure are by no means commensurate with the outrages committed, the fact that they are apt to be arrested—and none too gently handled by the police—will deter many of the cutthroats, and gradually put some pluck into the victims who now take their punishment lying down. In one important respect the depredations of the Black Hand are not as serious as they might be. At present the ruffians have no chief, no particular organization. They simply copy each other's methods. With the coming of some murderous, masterful outlaw, who would apply to the Black Hand the methods J. P. Morgan applied to the steel industry, the criminal capacity of the Black Hand would be enormously increased.

Directions To Prepare Simple, Yet Remarkable, Home Mixture.

There is so much Rheumatism here in our neighborhood that the following advice by an eminent authority, who writes for readers of a large eastern daily paper, will be highly appreciated by those who suffer. Get from any good pharmacy one-half ounce Fluid Extract of Dandelion, one ounce Compound Kagon, three ounces Compound Syrup, Sarsaparilla. Shake these well in a bottle and take in teaspoonful doses after each meal and at bedtime; also drink plenty of good water.

It is claimed that there are few victims of this dread and torturous disease who will fail to find ready relief in this simple home-made mixture, and in most cases a permanent cure is the result.

This simple recipe is said to strengthen and cleanse the eliminative tissues of the kidneys, so that they can filter and strain from the blood and system the poisons, acids and waste matter, which cause not only rheumatism, but numerous other diseases. Every man or woman who feels that their kidneys are not healthy and active, or who suffer from any urinary trouble whatever, should not hesitate to make up this mixture as it is certain to do much good, and may save you from much misery and suffering after while.

The doctor's supreme confidence in these little Candy Cold Cure Tablets—Preventives—is certainly complete. It's $100 against 25 cents—pretty big odds. ## INDIANS STARVING

Their Reserve Being in a Grazing District Sets Them at a Disadvantage.

Are the people of Canada allowing the wards of the nation to suffer the awful pangs of hunger through ignorance of the actual condition of affairs?

Are the members of a tribe of Indians being driven to acts of lawlessness which are only inspired by the cravings for sustenance which are natural to all men, which are red? Some westerers being posted on Indian affairs are most emphatic in answering: "Yes!"

The fact that a couple of Stoney Indians had their names on the supreme court docket, on a charge of cattle killing, comes as a shock to many.

The members of this tribe are invariably law abiding and industrious and have been pointed to as examples of what proper instruction and treatment will evolve from the sons of the prairie.

The Stoney Indians have been given the alternative of working or starving. It is impossible for them to secure work for more than a total of a few weeks in the year, so they are in a fair way to starve.

The whites in the vicinity of the reservation at Morley provided work so far as they are able, and some of the Indians have been employed cutting wood for the line kilns at Kananaskis. Others have cut and shipped wood and posts to Calgary, but as the demand for this is limited and all the wood near the railway has been cut, it cannot be considered a source of much value to even the small number engaged in it. The line kilns too will cease to use wood in the near future and thus another source of employment will be closed to them.

The Indians formerly owned a large number of horses, the sale of which has been their chief means of support during the past few years, particularly since their rations have been withdrawn, but they have now not enough for their own use.

Although the Indians are wards of the crown, they were compelled last year, under the law of the local government, to pay a license fee of $2.50 per rifle to the chief game guardian, who was on hand for the purpose of collecting it on treaty day, thereby depriving the Indians of one-half of their treaty payment, which would otherwise have gone for the purchase of four and other necessities. As a natural consequence he was compelled to kill more game than he otherwise would have done. So much for the game protection.

Their reserve is in the grazing section and it is utterly impossible for them to sustain themselves by farming, as owing to climate conditions, grain will rarely ripen and it is always cut as green feed. Potatoes and turnips yield a very inferior crop in the few sheltered plots where they are grown.

What the government has assisted the Indians by giving them a small number of cattle, the Indian is in no position to support himself until such time as the increase would afford him an appreciable assistance. In any case the reserve would not sustain a sufficient number of cattle to support the tribe, and as a matter of fact many Indians have no cattle at all.

The Blackfoot, Sarcee, Blood and Piegan Indians all have large reserves situated in good agricultural districts where they are rapidly becoming self-sustaining. They have received and are receiving far more assistance from the government than the Stoney Indians, although during the Northwest rebellion of 1885, the former had to be watched and policed, while the Stoney were the first to offer their assistance to the government and also volunteered their services as scouts, to the Imperial government, through Rev. John McDougall, their old friend and adviser, during the Boer war.

All the reserves, except that of the Stoney, being in good agricultural districts, have become valuable in the last few years, but the Stoney's reserve being in the grazing district is only worth the grass that grows on it and cannot further increase its value.

Owing to their poverty and lack of nourishing food during the past few years there has been an alarming increase in consumption. For example, one Indian has lost four children during the last eighteen months from this dread disease.

Those acquainted with the situation feel it is only necessary to call the attention of the public and the authorities to the facts of the case to relieve these worthy Indians from their present distress.

The remedy they propose is simply to return to former conditions and issue rations to these Indians and relieve their hunger. They claim it would be a simple act of justice which the people of Canada can well afford and which would meet with the hearty approbation of all who are familiar with the circumstances.

Indians, no matter how industrious cannot be expected to sustain themselves under conditions where white men could not make a living. This is the proposition which the most industrious, civilized, law abiding tribe of Indians in Canada have been compelled to face. Naturally the consequences are disastrous and if relief is not afforded them what the outcome will be is hard to guess.

FLAX IN ROTATION

Prof. Thomas Shaw Explains How Flax Seed May be Grown Without Injury to the Soil.

Prof. Thomas Shaw of the university of Minnesota, who was formerly a professor in the Ontario agricultural college at Guelph, is of the opinion that there is no more profitable crop for the farmer of the Northwest than flax seed. He says: "The idea prevails that flax is hard on land, viewed from the standpoint of the removal of plant food from the soil. Essentially it is not more so than wheat. The wheat among cereals is relatively hard on land furnishes no reason why it should not be grown where the conditions are favorable, but it does furnish a reason why it should be grown in such a way that the fertility of the land may still be maintained, and the same line of reasoning will apply to flax. When flax is grown in a judicious rotation, it fits as naturally into the same as any other crop."

The Proper Rotation

"The question now arises, what is the rotation in which flax should be grown? A little reflection will answer this question. When land is first broken, and when at the same time a proper seed bed is prepared, it furnishes the best crops. Why? For three reasons: First, it is well supplied with the elements of plant growing second, it is well stocked with humus, that is, vegetable matter and in a state of decay; and third, it is relatively clean. The decaying vegetable matter in the soils adds to the available fertility from other sources, and it also furnishes moisture to the plants. The relatively clean condition of the soil is very favorable to the growth of the flax crop, as it is not well fitted to cope with a vigorous growth of noxious weeds. The influence of the flax crop is also helpful, the quick reduction of the prairie sod, owing to the peculiar nature of the fibrous growth of the roots. These, penetrating every part, reduce the soil to a disintegrated pulverulent mass, which is greatly favorable to the growth of the succeeding grain crops other than flax."

Sod Land For Flax

"It has also been noticed that good crops of flax follow the breaking up of a sod field. For the same reasons that good crops of flax are grown on new breaking. The yields from crops grown on common sod land broken up are usually not quite so good as on new breaking, because the elements of fertility are not usually present to the same extent. But should farm yard manure be spread on sod land the previous year, the leechings from the same would stimulate the growth of grass roots, that these in decay would produce the best crop of flax that it would be possible to grow. It may happen, however, that in certain seasons the best crops may not come from sod land. However, the more sod land which the north west can furnish, the more will be the area of highest adaptation for growing the crop. The more grass to furnish pasture, the greater the number of the live stock and the greater the number of these the greater will be the supplies of manure to spread on the sod land on which flax is to be grown. The closer interdependence between much live stock and much flax in the future is thus apparent."

A Good Crop to Follow Wheat
"No crop north of the corn belt proper can follow wheat so well as flax. But, it has been noticed, that when flax is grown on old and worn land, the yields are low. The crop is also much injured by noxious weeds. Moreover, it has also been noticed that usually it is not wise to grow two crops of flax in succession or even without an interval of a few years between crops. This is owing to some substance left in the ground by flax roots detrimental to the growth of flax that follows on the same land. How many years should elapse between crops will depend on such conditions as the newness and strength of the land. Usually, however, a wise rotation would call for an interval of four or five years between crops. This does not mean, however, that in some instances good crops of flax cannot be grown in close succession. The increasing prevalence of flax will also accentuate the wisdom of growing flax crops in judicious rotation. It is thus apparent that the aim should be to grow flax not more frequently than four to five or even more than five years on the same land, and to grow it as far as possible, first on new breaking, second on over turned sod, and third on over turned sod previously manured."

PRINCE WILL VISIT CANADA

The Prince of Wales to be a Guest at Champlain Tercentenary.

His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales will attend the Champlain tercentenary celebration in Quebec next summer.

In connection with the second reading of the bill providing for a vote of $300,000 for the celebration in the House recently, Sir Wilfrid Laurier read the following letter from Earl Grey:

Government House, Ottawa, March 3, 1908.

My Dear Sir Wilfrid: It gives me great pleasure to inform you that His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, in response to your invitation, has graciously signified his willingness to attend the celebration of the founding of Quebec by Champlain, providing that can be held during the last week of July. Pre-arranged movements of the Atlantic fleet, which will accompany the Prince of Wales to Quebec, make it necessary for his highness to arrive on the 22nd of July, and to depart on the morning of the 29th of July.

His Highness regrets that for this reason his stay in the Dominion must be curtailed to make it impossible for him to visit places other than Quebec on this occasion. Lord Elgin who is anxious to do everything in his power to make the tercentenary a success, wishes to congratulate the Dominion on the important announcement which it is my privilege to request you to make to parliament of His Royal Highness's approaching visit. In joining most sincerely in these congratulations, I remain, Yours very sincerely,

(Signed) GREY.

HAZEN SPEAKS

He is Delighted With His Majority and With the Result in General.

Mr. Hazen, the new premier has issued a statement reviewing the causes which contributed to his victory in New Brunswick, and says: "I have had the support of thousands of Liberals in this election, and am grateful to them. The verdict in St. John and elsewhere, to my mind, was a most emphatic condemnation of the part taken in the campaign by Hon. Mr. Pugsley, who will go back to Ottawa a very much weaker man than when he went down to New Brunswick to interfere in local affairs."

"I would like to say how delighted I am with my increased majority in Sunbury county. I have not been able to give much attention to the campaign there, but no man ever had a warmer support in his native county, and this in the face of promises of post offices, warves and mail services made in such lavish manner by Col. McLean, backed up by the minister of public works."

Premier Robinson says that the opposition will deserve the support received from the electors if they carry out the promises to give children school books at half price, and if they can run the province and build steel bridges without adding to the public debt.

CITY HALL OPENED

The Magnificent Building Was Visited by Crowds on the Opening Occasion.

Thursday, Friday and Saturday were gala days for Regina citizens for on those days the council and civic officials held an informal reception for the citizens in the magnificent new city hall.

The building is one which the people of Regina may well be proud of, for there are few, if any, city halls in Canada, that will surpass this one. The rooms are spacious and the furniture is in keeping with the building. The furniture is of oak and is handsome and appropriate. In a first walk through the building everything seems to be all that could be desired. There are no superfluous ornamentations but everything seems to have been worked out with an eye to utility. This we think is to the credit of the contractors and the city hall committee, and not to the architect.

On the ground floor are the most used offices, viz., city clerk, city treasurer, mayor's parlor, city assessor, city solicitor and health and relief offices. On the same floor is the council chamber and committee rooms.

On the basement floor is the police magistrate's office, the police court with rooms for lawyers and witnesses, the police offices, the cells, as well as offices for the waterworks inspector and city foreman.

Upstairs is the auditorium with its gallery, the city engineers' office and public library.

The council chamber was the subject of comment by all who visited the hall. It is indeed an excellent room and the best furnished of any. On either side of the mayor's chair hang a life sized portrait of the king and queen. On the walls are also hung paintings of Mayor Smith and Ex-mayors Laird and McRae.

Reception
On Thursday afternoon from 3 to 5, Mayor and Mrs. Smith, with attendants were at the hall and welcomed the visitors. Music and refreshments were supplied in the auditorium, Prof. Laubach and his orchestra supplying the music.

W. H. Storey & Son, Limited, Acton, Ont.

In the evening addresses were delivered by Mayor Smith and Ald. Wilkinson, chairman of the city hall committee. At this evening's function the mayor formally declared the building open.

On Friday a similar reception was held, but in the evening addresses were dispensed with. Saturday afternoon was children's day and a host of children took possession of the hall.

Gave Birth to Six.

Stuebenville, Ohio, March.—Six perfectly formed children were born here today to Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Campbell. Three of the infants died within an hour after birth. One boy and a girl will live, it is said. Three were boys. Mrs. Campbell weighs less than a hundred pounds. The combined weight of the infants were 23 pounds. Physicians declare the case to be the most remarkable known. Campbell is a mill worker and has four brothers. To the family of two of these, twins have been born, and each of the other brothers is father of triplets.

Campbell's first wife died after becoming the mother of triplets.

Campbell was for twelve years in the United States navy and fought under Schley of Santiago. Two of his brothers are now with Admiral Evans' fleet in the Pacific.

BRANDON MILLS CLOSED.

Brandon, March 5.—The flour mills of the Wheat City Milling Co. have been temporarily closed down by the Merchants' Bank, who, it is understood have been carrying the company with heavy liabilities. Notices were posted in the mill this morning stating that the mill was closed pending a readjustment. The notices were signed by Geo. A. Harrison who was brought here by the bank from Vancouver and placed in charge of the mill, and the local branch of the bank temporarily, while Mr. Little, manager of the bank for the last four years, has been called east by head offices. It is expected that Wheat City Milling Co. will soon open up under new management.

Many rumors are heard on the street in reference to the financial difficulties of the milling company but definite information will not be available until Mr. Harrison has completed his investigation of affairs. In the meantime the bank officials nor those connected with the mill will make any statement for publication, but it is believed that the shareholders will be heavy losers by the present financial difficulty.
