Unique Collection of Portraits for Vic-

The portraits of the Wesley family

W. L. Forster will be a distinct acquisition to Toronto art. They will be finally hung in the Victoria University. The unveiling took place in the Metropolitan Church parlors on Monday, April 22, 1901. There are three portraits, representing John Wesley, the father of Methodism; Charles Wesley, the poet of Me thodism, and Susannah Wesley, the mother of Methodism. The portraits are the result of much travel and study by Mr. Forster in England, and he has omitted no detail of study which would assist in assuring accuracy of detail in the pictures and of likeness. The portrait of John Wesley is already well known to the art public of Toronto, as it is now on view at the Academy Exhibition. It represents John Wesley expounding a passage. His right hand is held aloft, and his right foot advanced. He is robed in black. The

an be seen the strength of convic tion and purpose which enabled him to carry out his great movement so successfully. The portrait of Charles Wesley shows him standing before a table with an open book upon it. In his left hand is a piece of manuscript.

VIVID AND GRAPHIC DESCRIPTION OF "THE PACE THAT KILLS."

ment of Charities and Correction, New York City, As a specialist Tells How "The Wages of Sia Is Death-Germ of the morals of the tenements are na-

The weaknesses of human nature are confined to no class of men. Wealth is not necessary for the pace that kills and poverty is no bar to Knowledge is not a preventive nd ignorance is only an acceleration. Health sometimes prompts it and disease is often its excuse. Gentle birth and careful training only stimulate it in some instances, while ommon origin and coarse breeding are accepted by it as a welcome variation. In the parlance of the race track-it "plays no favorites." The race is open to all comers, and no question is raised as to pedigree, age or previous performance. The nominator can make his own regulations. He can go the long course or the short course, over the flat or the hurdles, as he chooses. The only condition imposed is that he shall keep at it, and in the end the prize shall be his. For to everyone that goes the pace that kills and keeps at there is a prize—the prize of shame, disgrace, demoralization, death.

There is no need of preaching about it For centuries good men have inveighed against it from the pulpit and the rostrum. Learned scientists have written endless books against it. Saintly women have uttered their most devout prayers And yet it goes n and will go on. There is a germ of degeneracy in mankind that deelops under all conditions, and for which no remedy can be found. Its development is sometimes fast. But unless a check is put on it in its early stages the end is always the ame-the madhouse or the morgue. The department of public charities of the City of New York is the dumping ground of the refuse humanity of the second greatest city in the world. Here are deposited those creatures whom no other agency will care for. The sick, the pauper, the inebriate the idiot, the epileptic, the paralytic, the insane. Hundreds of these come every day. The gate of the public charities is always open, and no one is refused. Each day, too, is gathered the city's dead. From the river, from secluded corners of the parks, from little rooms in obscure hotels and from meager apartments of poor tenements are gathered day not worth living, or whose end came in such poverty that their only chance of interment was the potter's field. there one above the other in the compartments of the morgue, each corpse is the dumb witness of some life tragedy, some driving on to was no escape. If one were to take from this granary of the dead individual cases and trace them through all the steps that brought them to the morgue, one would find that directly or indirectly the end was due to the pace that kills. same is true of New York City's 10,-000 insane people and of its countless feeble-minded idiots and epileptics. Somewhere at some time some body has gone the pace that kills and not only has plunged himself into destruction, but has carried others with him, or has left seeds of dissipation that have sprung up after him. I never go through the morgue but that I feel that above its door should be written:

THE WAGES OF SIN IS DEATH,

I never visit the idiots, the feeble minded, the epileptics and the crippled children in my department but that I am reminded that the sins of the father shall be visited upon the child. I never see decent old women come weeping to the almshouse but that I am sure there is a relentless fate that mixes up the lives of men and makes the innocent suffer with

But while the germ of degeneracy may not be eradicated or even regulated, there is no doubt in my mind that its effect can be minimized and that through the active agencies now at work it is being minimized. There is always the fool to be parted from be the powder of reduction that his money and there is always, that must be periodically appeased whether it manifests itself in drink or ripped off its hinges and fell down impetuousity of temperament gambling or any other form of dissi- blam! The alchemist scuffled out pation. But statistics will show, I from under the ruins of the furnace, believe, that urban people are better to-day than at any other period in the world's history. The pace that self, and wondered what had struck kills is a vice that comes with civili- him. He tried it again and again, zation and its accumulation of wealth and its prevalence of poverty; for, as the fortunes of a few men in-crease the fortunes of many men decrease, and the fool without money goes the pace quite as disastrously to himself as the fool with money. Some men go it because they are and some becuase they are rich poor, some because they are well and ome becuase they are sick, some because they are happy and some beause they are unhappy. Their attitude is much the same as that of the man who drank in cold weather to man who drank in cold weather to keep himself warm and in warm weather to keep himself cool.

As I said before, the germ of degeneracy works in all kinds of people and under all kinds of conditions.

Put with the advance of six tions. But with the advance of civilization there has come a conviction on the part of students of municipal government that in municipal government attention is given rather to effect than to cause. New York city spends princely sums of money in taking care of criminals and paupers. It should pay more attention to the causes of crime and poverty. to the causes of crime and poverty.

The body of this queer little horse is as large as usual, but its double jointed legs are only 18 inches long. It is a 3-year-old, and its sire and dam are regularly formed, weighing about 2,280 pounds each, while their frisky offspring is only 650 pounds in weight. Germany gave to the world one of the most mirth producing of beasts, the dachshund dog, and Wisconsin has had the honor of adding to the gayety of nations by turning out the dachshund horse.

The Easter Rabbit.

There is a curious and very sweet little legend cherished by German children concerning the Easter rabbit. Once upon a time, they tell us, a nice, kind rabbit, who was walking along a quiet woodland road, came across a fine, large nest filled with eggs. The poor mother hen had been seized by a wicked fox and could not go back to her darling nest, so this kind rabbit slept all night upon it, and when he woke in the morning-it was Easter morning-the nest was full of little, downy, yellow chickens. chickens thought the rabbit was their own mamma, so they cried out for some thing to eat, and the rabbit ran about and fetched food for them and kept them warm and fed until they were all old enough to take care of themselves. Ever since then the rabbit has been the special genius of Easter time, and this holiday is not complete for German little folk with-out an "Oster hase's nest." It holds many a favor and present, serving the same purpose that Christmas stockings and wooden shoes do at Christmas time. —Mrs. A. G. Lewis in Woman's Home Companion.

A Way to Make Smoke Rings. Here is a simple way to make smoke rings: First procure a cubical cardboard box with a small, round opening in two of its opposite sides; fill it with smoke from burning paper and send the ring into the air by hitting the palm of the hand against one hole so as to eject the smoke wreath at the other. In this way most excellent rings are formed, and if received on a piece of damp glass the rings can be caught and held for a few room, free from drafts, the regularity and duration of the rings will provide a sur-prise for those who have not tried the ex-

The Game of Proverbs.

The game of proverbs is always a good amusement for a party. One child is chosen as the guesser and leaves the room, while the rest select the proverb and divide the words between them in order as they sit in a circle. The guesser returns and asks each person a trivial question, and the player in answering must introduce the word of the proverb intrusted to him or her. Another way of playing the game is to choose a proverb containing as many words as there are players and all shout the words together when the guesser enters the room.

So over goes a penny and into the water all the water rats dive at once, and soon up comes the lucky one with it in his mouth. Then it is "Penny, please," again until the ship leaves port. These boys are mostly fishermen's sons.—W. Schmedtgen in Chicago Record.

The leader says: "I went shopping this morning and everything I bought began with A. The penalty is to take the place of the leader and start another letter.

Pure Blood.

Your blood is pure when it contains a certain amount of nutrition, when the blood cells are in a certain healthy condition, and when there is oxygen enough to neutralizeany impurities that may get in.

The poison that gathers in your system during the winter is forming germs constantly, and if your blood has not enough condensed oxygen you'll be very sick and liable to fevers. Powley's Liquified Ozone is antiseptic, and furnishes the system with condensed oxygen. It is especially adapted for blood disorders because it acts directly on the blood to purify it. MISS LILY HALL, 12 Sully Street, Toronto, says:-A year ago I was unable to go out of doors without a veil covering, on account of eczema on my face, and was unable to get it cured. I was doubtful but persistent with Ozone, and have been thankful ever since it cured me.

Powley's Liquified Ozone is $1.00 a bottle, large size; 50c. small size; at all druggists. Write The Ozone Co., of Toronto, Limited, 48 Colborne St., Toronto, for Health Literature.
