THE BIG WEST END ESTABLISHMENT

Many Bankers Here.

There are now twelve Lumbermen's banks in port, and all are being supplied by Job Bros. & Co., and the staff there are pretty busy issuing the supplies. Thursday evening the following vessels arrived here: Wm. C. Smith, with 1,500 qds. Watonga, 1,500 qds. Arizana, 1,500 qds. Bevinco, 1,175 and Alden. The fleet of vessels, with their riding lights up, as they rode out the storm off Job's premises last night presented a pretty spectacle.

NEW ENGINE OUT.

The new engine, No. 111, was taken out for a trial spin yesterday afternoon under steam and went a short distance up the road. She is of the same class as Nos. 105 to 110. The other locomotives to be built will be 112, 113, 114, 115, 116, 117 and 118. The new engine is a beauty and possesses a very powerful and musically sounding whistle which could easily be heard over the whole city yesterday.

THEY QUIT WORK.—The men working at the Stephano last night discharging cargo from some holds and loading off in the others kept at it until 9 p.m., then the storm became so fierce and so heavily did the rain fall that the men had to quit work and go home, most of them saturated.

COD VERY PLENTYFUL.—Boats fishing off this port are still doing well, and as squid is plentiful they get good fares daily. Yesterday they averaged from 10 to 12 cwt. per boat.

COLLECTION TO-MORROW.—We would remind our Roman Catholic fellow citizens of the annual collection which will be taken up at the Cathedral, St. Patrick's and St. Joseph's to-morrow in aid of St. Michael's Orphanage.

LOST VALUABLE HORSES.—Cabanman Jas. Stamp, a hardworking man with a large family, suffered a severe loss during the week when two fine horses owned by him perished. Both were valued at $360, and the loss is one which Mr. Stamp can ill afford.

NOTE OF THANKS.—Mr. and Mrs. Henry Rockwood desire to thank Mrs. R. G. Rendell, the W. & N. Commissioned Officers and lads of the C. L. B. and the Senior Boys Class of the Cathedral Sunday School and others who so kindly sent flowers and wreaths to adorn the coffin of their beloved son, and all those who so kindly sympathized with them in their hour of bereavement—adv.

EXTRACTS

From C. H. E. Examiners' Reports.

PRELIMINARY GRADE.

Scripture History.—The Book of the Acts apparently contains more matter than these young candidates were able to bear in clear memory, and it might be better to take part of it another time. As it was, half the candidates were unable to distinguish persons and places in the incidents recorded, confusing such names as Peter and Paul, Aeneas and Ananias, Matthias and Matthew, Miletus and Melita; and evidently they had not been taught to follow the main course of events in St. Luke's great history of the spread of the Christian Faith.

English (Grammar).—As usual, the questions were well answered; but the names of the Parts of Speech were often misspelt.

Literature.—An excellent knowledge of the facts and contexts of the set of books was most clearly exhibited. A very pleasing feature was the decided improvement in the expression throughout. What had to be said, was said well.

History.—There were a few papers of some merit, but on the whole the answers were very unsatisfactory. So far as the candidates (with but few exceptions) showed any knowledge at all, it was of the least important incidents in the lives of the persons, or connected with the reigns, forming the subjects of the respective questions. . . . The spelling was in many cases very bad, and some proper names were hardly recognizable: e.g., "police" or "points" for "pious," "Chippendale" for "Chippendale," "Lord Beggar" for "Bacon," the "Uniformity" of Oxford (said to be founded by Alfred), "hearts of peace" (for "arts"), and "systematics" (coupled with "heretics").

Geography.—The general impression produced by the papers of 1911 was that they were on the whole inferior to those of 1910. . . . Question 1 required the drawing of a map of Newfoundland with a view to showing certain essential points. As a rule, this was satisfactorily done. The outline was wonderfully accurate for so intricate an outline as Newfoundland presents, and the various points were indicated with intelligence. . . . In Questions 6 and 7 a table of general facts had to be compiled and the facts of certain well-known places to be appraised. Though these produced, perhaps, the greatest crop of gross mistakes ("Germany," to wit, "the capital of France," and "the Niger as the second great river in Egypt"), they were not unsatisfactory on the whole.

Arithmetic.—A satisfactory average standard was reached.

Tots.—The Tots were in several instances done with complete accuracy, and only comparatively few candidates failed in this exercise.

Algebra.—A fair percentage of good work was done. The weaknesses of the work, a feature noted last year, is also very apparent this year.

Geometry.—The papers indicated improvement over those of last year. Even so, there was little grasp of the subject on the part of a considerable number of the candidates. In many cases the preliminary work of the proposition was done, but the proof omitted.

Book-keeping.—While many batches of papers were distinctly good, others were very weak.

French.—The translation into French showed that the students had made a great effort to increase their vocabulary and their knowledge of idiomatic expressions. The passages from the set books were very well translated, and that accounts for the high percentage of passes obtained.

Latin.—The paper was very well done by the majority of candidates. The examiner repeats the suggestion made in the report on last year's examination—viz., that most of the candidates should be doing more advanced work.

General Elementary Science.—The work shows a great advance on that submitted last year.

Hygiene.—Though there were relatively few papers of high excellence, yet the general average of the work was unusually good.

Agriculture.—There was a somewhat greater number of weak candidates than last year, although, as in 1910, the work of the candidates at some centres was quite satisfactory.

Horticulture.—The answers, on the whole, were satisfactory; the subject had been carefully prepared and few blunders were made.

Plain Needlework.—There has been an earnest endeavour on the part of the candidates to cut out a pair of drawers suitable to be worn by a child, but the size required by any particular age did not seem to be realized. Taking the paper patterns as a whole, however, they were on a higher level than the calico specimens.

Shorthand.—In the majority of cases the papers showed a high standard of teaching.

Typewriting and Office Routine.—The quality of typewriting work has improved in both speed and accuracy. School Management.—Very few candidates answered all the questions satisfactorily. . . . The majority appeared to have learned from a book a comprehensive statement respecting school discipline. A minority of these selected from what was required, and wrote it accurately; the rest wrote either the whole of it or unsuitable parts, often with serious errors in grammar and spelling. According to the latter section, the marks of good discipline were either so many marks given daily or rewards and punishments.

Penmanship.—The papers were of good general merit, with a large number of distinctions.

Drawing.—No improvement in methods or results is observable at present.

Fancy Needlework.—Much of the work shown was very good, and deserved commendation.

PRIMARY GRADE.

Spelling Test, Handwriting, and Reproduction of Story.—Only five candidates were absolutely free from error in the special test in Spelling, but the average was again fair, although so many mistakes in Spelling occurred in the "Reproduction of the Story," many of which would have been corrected had there been careful revision. . . . The reproduction of the story was, on the whole, the most satisfactory part of the work, indicating great intelligence. The number obtaining the maximum was larger than ever before, and very few failed to appreciate the point of the story. On the whole, this work was at least equal to the best that has been sent up by candidates in this grade.

English Grammar.—The unevenness of this work makes general comment exceedingly difficult.

English Literature.—The work in this subject showed some improvement though few papers rose above mediocrity.

British History.—A fair proportion of candidates sent up intelligent and well informed papers, but there was a large amount of mere cram work, reproduced verbatim from text or note-books.

Geography.—Many of the papers were exceedingly done, and gave evidence of careful and thoughtful teaching.

Arithmetic.—The questions on the ordinary rules were, with the exception of those in decimals, hardly so well answered as usual, but better results were secured in the rest of the paper.

Tots.—The number who obtained full marks on this paper was not large, but a fair proportion did more or less satisfactorily. Several, however, failed completely.

Algebra.—A fair proportion of satisfactory work was done.

Geometry.—The form displayed by the candidates is somewhat better than it was last year.

Hygiene.—The papers were, on the whole, of good quality. Most candidates attempted every question, and showed not merely fair knowledge of book-work, but also a good deal of common sense in the application of that knowledge.

Plain Needlework.—The work of a great many of the candidates deserved commendation, especially in the cutting-out of the specified garment, a working-woman's apron. The majority of the candidates sent in a sensible garment, although the meaning of a pattern cut half-size was not generally understood.

Drawing.—The Drawings from the Flat showed no improvement in the aggregate.
