

The Defence Committee.

Special to The Evening Telegram.
OTTAWA, To-day.

A despatch received by the Government from the Secretary of State for the Colonies throws some new light on the proposal that self-governing Dominions be given representation on the Imperial Defence committee. A despatch, dated December 10th, was sent to the Governors of all self-governing Dominions of the Empire. It shows that a proposal now likely to become effective, was considered during the Imperial Conference, 1911, the resolution put forward by His Majesty's Government having been unanimously accepted by members of the Imperial Defence. The resolution provided for the invitation of one or more Ministers from respective governments to Imperial Defence Committee and for the establishment in each of Dominions of a Defence Committee to be constituted according to the decision of each Dominion. Borden has reached the understanding that representatives of Dominions on the Imperial Defence Committee be informed on all questions of Imperial policy.

Spanish Politics.

MADRID, To-day.

The bulk of opinion sees in ex-Premier Maura's withdrawal from activity signs of the complete defeat of the reactionary politics in Spain. The reorganized Conservatives seem to be tending towards Liberalism, while the Liberals, accentuating their progressive tendencies, appear to be desirous of reconciling the advanced element with monarchy.

Terrible weather was experienced on the West Coast the past two days.

Sensation in Boston.

The sensation at Boston, Mass., at the present time is the arrest of six men on a charge of swindling some of the most representative people of the city out of hundreds of thousands of dollars in connection with the publication of a Directory or Who's Who. The principal is a St. John's man named James Power, who left here many years ago. He is a literary man and linguist and is known to many in the West End where he was born.

The Woman Who Waits.

Who has not in passing in an evening before some cottage or mansion, it may be—caught a fleeting glimpse through the window pane of a woman's eager face peering from behind the curtain at sound of footsteps and then fading into blankness at sight of form not looked for?

All have seen it, perhaps many, many times. To any one who has met, the first and simplest lesson in the deep mystery of a woman's life is only a dream undreamt.

The woman is waiting.

For what? God and she alone know. There are so many things woman may wait for.

Perhaps it is for the lover.

Or the child at play, whose time for return has passed and whose way home night threatens to darken.

Or the wayward daughter, whose pathway is ever dark but for the unfading light of the mother love.

Or who knows?—the gallant son reported dead in shipwreck distant land or battle, but for whose return she can never cease to hope and pray.

Or—God help her then!—the drunkard husband.

But there she waits.

Aye, thus a woman ever waits. From the dawn of her birth to the night of her death the woman waits. She waits and longs and hopes and prays.

It is not so with man. His faith is in his strength. He sets his shoulders to the storm with firm resolve, and what he seeks to do he does or fails.

And if success be his some woman shares it, and if he fails some woman waits.

And so she waits.

In her fresh sweet young womanhood she knows a youth who pleases her, but he is cold and she must wait until he comes and woos.

And then, perchance, she loves too well, and when the faithless lover lags she waits—she waits.

When husband turns from her to other joys, she waits—she weeps and waits.

Ah, man knows not the patience sweet, the love and faith with which a woman waits!

How often she, in midnight gloom, beside the couch of dying child, must watch and wait, hope and wait, pray and wait!

Her waiting is not weakness, though; it is her strength.

If you, brave man, have ever been in battle line amid a rain of shell and rifle shot, and must not fire, but wait and wait and wait—why, then you know what courage is.

But woman ever waits.

The faith sublime with which the woman waits spiritualizes earth and humanizes heaven.—Charles Grant Miller in Woman's World for October.

The Prospero left Trinity at 5:40 a.m. to-day.

The Plumber.

BY H. L. RANN.

Mr. Rann.

The plumber is an opulent and independent citizen who is always away at some fashionable watering resort just when the hired girl discovers a sinuous leak in the bathroom. He is not subject to the recall, as he usually takes the telephone with him.

The plumber is a high-priced performer, and by working one day a week can support a large family in affluence and pony-skin coats. He charges $1 an hour or fraction thereof, and on this account it is quite expensive to allow a plumber to work until six minutes past six. He always carries a stop watch, which prevents him from undercharging anybody.

When the plumber is unable to come to the house in person and see what has gotten into the kitchen sink, he sends a blase and indifferent menial who does not seem to appreciate the fact that tempus is fugit at the rate of $1 per hour, but who consumes 60 cents' worth of the patron's time in trying to light a corn-cob pipe. He then finds that he has left practically all of his tools down at the shop and has to go back after them at an expense of $1.60.

If he returns the same week, the plumber's assistant discovers that he is short a favorite monkey wrench, which he left on a windmill three miles south of town. After consuming three-quarters of an hour wondering how the monkey wrench looked when he last saw it, at a total cost of 75 cents, he recovers the implement with a lively rig, which bobs up in the patron's bill eighteen months later disguised as labor.

The plumber is never so much at home as when something goes wrong with the cistern pump. By taking off a leather washer, squinting through it with the left eye and putting it back upside down, in the meantime carrying on an animated conversation with somebody who works by the week, he is able to run up a bill which will cause the head of the house to blaspheme with considerable emotion.

The salvation of the plumber is concealed plumbing. This is generally so carefully concealed that it is necessary to tear out four or five partitions and rip up several feet of baseboard before locating the seat of pain.

ATHENS, To-day.

An official communication issued by the Minister of Marine thus describes the engagement between the Greek and Turkish warships off the Dardanelles. The Greek destroyers, cruising off the Straits, announced at 2 o'clock this morning two Turkish Cruisers followed by six destroyers had been sighted at the entrance of the Dardanelles. The whole Greek squadron immediately weighed anchor and steamed to meet the enemy. At 10:35 a.m. the Turkish cruiser Medjidieh detached itself from the other vessels which remained under the shelter of the Forts at Sedibair and proceeded to West Tenedos. The Medjidieh fired six or seven shells. Two Greek destroyers cruising there replied. The enemy, however, drew off into the Straits immediately. They perceived other Greek destroyers coming up. At 11:25 the Medjidieh and Hamidieh separated from the squadron which remained at the entrance of the Straits, advanced West towards Tenedos where for half an hour they exchanged shots with Greek destroyers. The Turkish cruisers followed with their destroyers. The fight ended by the flight of the enemy's warships into the Straits, immediately they observed the whole Greek fleet approaching the horizon.

NEW YORK, To-day.

Taft warmly denounced the Senate in connection with the defeat of the proposed arbitration treaties with Britain and France. Once in a while he said, there comes an opportunity that seems a great step forward. When that opportunity is lost, when the step which might have been taken is not taken, the hearts of those whose hopes were high are saddened. This meeting brings back to me the triumphant feeling that I had in my soul before when I visited almost every State in the Union and urged the confirmation of treaties which we had made with England and France. Then I lived to find them defeated by the highest legislative body in the world, as some members of that body are in the habit of calling it. England made a treaty, France did the same. There was no doubt about the confirmation by those Governments of those treaties. If they could safely do it why could not the States? It remains for gentlemen who have exalted the Senate above everything to find in the constitution something that prevents them from doing what must be done. If the cause of universal peace is to prosper, but they say there may arise after you had made the contract, some question coming within the described class that you do not want to submit, some question on which you are likely to be beaten, in which you are likely to suffer a great national loss. Well, you cannot make omelets without breaking eggs; you cannot always have jug-handled arrangements. In international agreements you must expect sometimes to be beaten. A sure thing, among gentlemen, who bet even, is not regarded as this most honorable standard for making bets. Certainly one who would refuse to abide the judgment of a court, unless he knew in advance the Judge was with him, is not the kind of litigant that we are in the habit of welcoming into courts.

WASHINGTON, To-day.
President Taft is willing to submit the arbitration question as an issue between Britain and the States over the Panama tolls, but does not favor arbitration by the Hague tribunal. This fact became known here upon the President's return from New York, although he has not yet given the matter of tribunal much thought. The President probably would prefer a special board of arbitration, composed of an equal number of citizens of the States and Britain. Such was the composition of arbitration courts, he proposed to settle any vital questions arising between nations when he spoke on behalf of arbitration treaties. The President expressed to friends the view that at the Hague all Europe would be against this nation. That the moral pressure of the court would be enormous, because all Europe is interested in Panama tolls, just as much as England in the Court, while only Britain and the States are represented. Several Democrats and Senators have voiced the opinion that a special tribunal must be created to arbitrate this dispute.
