Condemned Without Trial.

By RUTH CAMERON.

One of my friends will never recommend a book or a play without qualifying his statement by adding "in my opinion." In other words he is careful to make it plain that while he likes such and such a play or book it is quite possible you may not.

Yet this same man, speaking of a person he knew and I did not know, said the other day, "You won't like him at all. He is very conceited and disagreeable."

Now I think he is typical of a great many people, who, wise enough to realize that your tastes and theirs may differ in many matters of like and dislike, will not hesitate to say that you will, or will not like some acquaintance of theirs. You are assured that, "Oh, you wouldn't care for her at all," or that "He's just splendid. I know you'll be crazy about him."

If we hear a book or play condemned, it is quite probable that we will accept the judgment as final without further investigation. The loss to us, if any, is negative. But when it comes to the man or woman whose qualities we have heard discussed, we are less fortunate. For it is quite possible that sooner or later we will come into contact with them. And then our preconceived notions will, like as not, bring us to grief.

I know of a man who had been described to me as hard and sharp. At first sight I read in his face confirmation of all I had heard and myself added the adjective "rueful." He was a business man and I had some dealings with him. I kept very much on my guard. I was determined he should take no advantage of me. Afterwards I described these dealings to still another person and told of my satisfaction at having escaped unscathed.

"Why," said he, in amazement, "that's the funniest thing I ever heard. S— would give his last cent to the first man that asked him for it. If his wife hadn't held him back, he'd have been bankrupt long ago."

Now my second informant unquestionably knew more about S— than the first had. And had I gone to S— with an open, unprejudiced mind, I would probably have seen in his face and manner something quite different from that which my misinformation led me to look for. But I had fallen into a very common fault. Instead of saying to myself, "S— is hard and sharp because T— says he is," I should have said "T— thinks S— hard and sharp. I wonder if it's so." But I had simply adopted T—'s opinion, as the truth, without stopping to think it might be nothing more than T—'s opinion after all.

It's just as well to remember, when somebody tells you something complimentary about somebody else you do not know, that some day somebody may say something uncomplimentary about you to somebody who doesn't know you. It would be the height of injustice for this person who had never seen you to condemn you on hearsay evidence—wouldn't it?

And of course it would be equally unjust for you to condemn anybody you had never seen, on any such inadequate grounds.

To Santa Claus

FROM MRS. ROSSLEY.

Dear Santa Claus,—You must be worried to death almost, so near Christmas and this dreadful war interfering with your doll trade, because all your dear little girl friends will expect you to visit them just the same. Now, Santa, you and I being very good friends of many years standing, I am going to help you. Early in the spring I had a great case of beautiful dolls shipped out from Liverpool, England. Such a selection! You, with your wonderful experience, never saw such beauties. There are lady dolls, baby actresses, soldiers, sailors, jolly jack tars in real uniforms, Indians, squaws, Red Riding Hoods, dairy maids, babies that float in water; in fact every kind. I am sure your eyes will sparkle when you look on them, for they are all lovely. Will you call and see me on Wednesday next and get a good supply for your little friends. There will be some sweet little girls who are just counting the days until you pay your annual visit, and how disappointed they would feel if you did not leave them the doll they are looking forward to. Now you call early, Santa, because a lot of mothers will be there also. I forgot to mention that I will have these dolls in the C.I.B. Armory on Wednesday.

Your sincere friend, MRS. ROSSLEY. Minard's Liniment Cures Diphtheria.

Labour Bureau.

Announcements were made in the Methodist Churches yesterday of a plan by which those who are at present without work or prospect of work may register their names, addresses, and trade, if any, at Gower St. Church this week between the hours of 9 and 10 a.m.

Also those who want men for any work whatever are asked to attend at the same hour, and efforts will be made to bring those who need work and those who want work done together.

Of course work at once cannot be guaranteed but every effort will be made to relieve the situation caused by the war and with the co-operation of all workers this Bureau ought to be an excellent forerunner of a State organized Department so that an immediate interest in the welfare of every worker will give a fresh meaning to the term "paternal" Government.

The Five Dollars a Day Dropped.

GOVERNMENT RECONSIDERATION. Prime Minister's Office, St. John's, Nfld., 7 Nov., 1914.

Editor Evening Telegram. Dear Sir,—Having regard to the references which have been made the past few days in the press concerning day as field allowance, this $3.75 per well, Regimental Paymaster, First Nfld. Regiment, it is, I think, proper that the facts, as far as they are known to me, should be made public.

Captain Timewell having been appointed in the regular way Paymaster of the Regiment, the salary fixed for him was $3 per day and 75 cents per day as field allowance. This $3.75 per day was the same rate as that allowed the other Captains.

Before leaving here for England Timewell represented to the Government that an allowance of One Pound per day would be a reasonable amount for personal expenses to maintain himself outside the Regimental Mess when the contingent was at the front, and to cover expenses which other officers have not to incur.

Under such circumstances, and assuming it was necessary and usual for Captain Timewell to live apart from the Regiment, and the fee suggested what is paid by Canada and other countries, it was thought that One Pound per day, in addition to travelling expenses, would meet the case, and accordingly, on Thursday, October 22nd, a day or so before Captain Timewell sailed for England, this amount was agreed to by the Government.

Subsequently, however, the question was further considered, and on November 2nd I wrote His Excellency the Governor as follows: Prime Minister's Office, St. John's, 2 Nov. 1914.

His Excellency the Governor: Sir,—Following upon our conversation of this morning in relation to allowances to Captain Timewell, I desire to suggest, for the consideration of your Excellency, whether it would not be wise to communicate with Captain Timewell at the earliest possible moment that it is the opinion of the Government, after carefully considering the question of allowances made him, that the first order namely Field Allowance 75 cents per day and pay of $3 a day as Captain is ample remuneration for the services rendered by him, having regard to the rate paid other officers; and that, in addition, his expenses when incurred in travelling on the business of the Regiment while in England or elsewhere, certified to by his proper officer, shall also be met by him; but that the One Pound per day allowed was never contemplated as a continuous payment. Further, in the opinion of the Government having regard to the very large proportion of the War Fund which will have to be administered in this country by payment to the relatives of the members of the Regiment here, through one of our public offices, there will be no need for him to open an office in England or at the front. The amount of actual work performed is not great, considering that he pays the money, not to the individual men, but to the Captain of the various companies, and take the regular receipts. The Bank of Montreal has already opened a branch of their business at Salisbury Plain and I have no doubt would be glad to keep his account and to do it free of charge; not alone while the men are there, but when they are at the front. It is to be noted that it is no difficulty in his drawing the money from the nearest bank in France or Belgium or Germany and get it through the Bank of Montreal in London.

Under these circumstances it seems to me that Captain Timewell should mess with the other officers and remain permanently with them wherever they may be. E. P. MORRIS, Prime Minister.

P.S.—The contents of this letter have since been conveyed to Captain Timewell by His Excellency the Governor. Yours truly, E. P. MORRIS.

Why Tars Wear Blue and White! The selection of blue and white as the color of our naval uniform came about in a curious way. In the middle of the 18th century it was decided to have a regular uniform for the Navy, and the then Admiral of the Fleet was summoned to attend a meeting to settle on the color. The Duke of Bedford, who was present, spoke up and said that the King, George II., had seen the Duchess of Bedford riding in a habit of blue faced with white and that the color of this dress had so taken His Majesty's fancy that he had ordered it to be the color of the uniform of the Royal Navy. Since that time the Royal Navy Blue has become a standard, and we are pleased to announce to all British subjects everywhere that in the dyeing of garments to this color we give complete satisfaction.
