Impressions of Bonavista

At last we were bound for Bonavista. Kind friends had previously informed us that the place of our destination was a very large one and also the fact that it was inhabited by a large number of people. We have found both these assertions to be true, but we have also discovered that there are some very large people here too.

The mass of houses that present themselves to one's view—houses of all designs and sizes from the humble fisher's cot to the magnificent residence of the merchant—make it indeed worthy to be called a city. We find the place divided (as every town is) into sections. That to the extreme left (facing the sea) we know as the "Castille" from what source this distinctive appellation comes I am unaware. The centre is of course called the Harbor, the right hand side section we call Bayley's Cove, near which is situated "Mockbeggar." This latter is said to have received its name from an expression of some spirited son of the Emerald Isle. The surrounding land is of a marshy nature. Here our friend the Irishman on leaping from a boat exclaimed "muck, begor!" This has since been corrupted into "mock-beggar."

Perhaps the places that stand out most prominently to view would be naturally the different churches and the residence of the various clergymen, the Orange Hall, the R. C. Hall, the Salvation Barracks, the combined Courthouse, Custom and Post Office and lastly but by no means least, the "Thorntree Hotel" where the wants of the weary traveller and the cravings of the inner man are so well looked after by the proprietress. In the business section the most notable are the premises of the late James Ryan, Esq., Messrs. Philip Templeman, W. H. House & Co. and Joseph T. Swyers. The premises of the latter three are newly constructed and present quite an attractive appearance both interior and exterior. Perhaps their most striking feature would be the clean and neat arrangement of everything within. An extensive fish store is now in course of construction for Messrs. House and Company. But the largest and by far the most beautiful building is the new Methodist Church which is now fast nearing (exterior) completion. Some have made the assertion that it is the largest church of that denomination in the Island. I am prepared to vouch for the truth of this assertion, but I am of the opinion that in exterior grandeur it will stand second to few if any in the Island. The lodge of the I.O.G.A. is another commodious and attractive building. The membership of this lodge would, we understand, in point of numbers, compare favourably with any in the neighbouring Dominion.

The town is everywhere intersected with streets and bye-ways, but most of these are narrow and hardly merit the name "street." One peculiarity in the layout of the place is the irregular manner in which the houses are constructed. Some we find quite near the roadside, others at various distances from the same, just as suited the builders at the time. Even on the principal roadways this is conspicuously apparent. The greatest drawback that prevents the town from assuming any large commercial importance is its naturally shoal harbor. Even the Bay boats are unable to approach a wharf for this reason. The harbor being open to the mercy of the seasmakes it is unsafe as a port for schooners.

It is in reality a large town, whose inhabitants depend chiefly on the home fishery for their means of support. Once a visitor always a visitor for the hospitality of the people attracts you there.—SENEX.

The "Advocate" Answered.

The Advocate asks in what respect Mr. Coaker's conduct resembles that of Lenin and Trotsky. Take several instances. First, Coaker interferes with the freedom of the press, suppressing independent reports of his sayings at meeting of exporters. Second, Coaker seeks to establish a "State Bank" which he would control, using deposits by the people to build Cold Storage Warehouses abroad, and aims at buying and selling all the fish of the Colony. What is that but Socialism, such as Russia suffers under today. What real freedom exists here to-day with the War Measures Act as a bludgeon? Coaker acts like an enthroned autocrat.

In a great address recently made at St. Louis, to the American Bar Association, the British Ambassador, Sir Auckland Geddes, made remarks which apply very forcibly to affairs in this Colony. He said "Lincoln epitomizes as Government of the people, by the people, for the people, the best form of Government that the human race has been able to devise."

"The Bolsheviks are naturally violently opposed to it. So too is every one in every land who has what he regards as a big idea or great principle of incalculable good, which he or she wishes to force upon the people, whether they wish it or no. So too in all countries are many of those who have great possessions. So of course is every one who makes the demand that he is outside the law."

"I have listened to a labor leader with the mentality of a medieval robber baron argue in the same breath that might was right and that his union should be the law, and that the voice of the people must prevail, though I could not help suspecting him of mentally spelling people with a capital P."

Let the Bolshevik and their supporters in all lands prate as they will of reactionaries and imperialists. They themselves are the reactionaries. They admitted doctrine is to establish a privileged class which they call the proletariat, but they mean by that term a select body of their own supporters. Their whole creed is to force on society a great idea which has been revealed to them and to them alone, and, like it or dislike it, society is to swallow it whole—and that is nothing but pure theocracy.

The Jamboree.

Sir Robert Baden-Powell well deserves the honor of being acclaimed "Chief Scout of the World" at the finishing ceremony of the Jamboree at Olympia. To all of us the Jamboree has been a revelation of the university and the strength of the Scout movement. To General Baden-Powell it has been the crown of the work of his later life. Beyond all other men he has shown his understanding of boys and how their natural instincts may be turned to their profit in later life. That is the secret of the success of the Boy Scout movement;—it has harnessed to useful purposes the imagination, the physical energy, and the craving for excitement of youth. It has given these things their scope and direction, instead of endeavoring to repress them. There have been those throughout who have endeavored to give a military side to the movement. Himself a soldier, Sir Robert Baden-Powell has steadily set his face against such a development. He may well have augured the greatest peace movement in the world. It must have been a proud moment for him when on Saturday he pledged his aids to keep the peace which their elders had bought with their lives.—Westminster Gazette.

Didn't Have One.

The teacher gazed sorrowfully at the small boy who stood in front of her. He was convicted of the heinous charge of stealing toffee from one of his school fellows.

As it was his first offence, however, she did not desire to inflict corporal punishment—a moral lecture, she thought, would fit the case.

"Bear in mind, Bobby," she concluded, "that these temptations can be resisted if determination is used. Always turn a deaf ear to temptation."

The child gazed solemnly at her. "But, teacher," he exclaimed, "I ain't got a deaf ear!"

Labor's Challenge.

The leaders of organized labor, both revolutionary and moderate, within Parliament and without, have directly challenged the Government upon their foreign policy. They announce that Labor and not Parliament are the masters. Quite apart from the merits of the question at issue, it is clear that the revolt against constitutional government which has long been preparing has now declared itself. It is a challenge no Government can dare to neglect. The Government have expressly stated that no action with regard to Poland will be taken without the approval of Parliament. If, then, the Prime Minister's proposals are sanctioned by Parliament, the proclamation of a general strike will be nothing more nor less than revolution. That is the situation. In these circumstances, it is the duty of every loyal citizen to support the Government, and to subordinate all other considerations to a national emergency.—London Morning Post.

Morganic marriages for royalties are very carefully guarded in England, and a case such as that of the King of Greece, would now be difficult. By the Royal Marriage Act members of the royal family cannot marry without the consent of the crown in council. If that consent be refused, and the petitioner is over 25 years old he may give notice to the privy council of his intention to marry. After an interval of 12 months he may then marry, unless both houses of parliament signify their disapproval. Even then he may not be married by a registrar. So that the safeguards are numerous.

Wedding Bells.

A very quiet but pretty wedding was solemnized at the residence of Mrs. Stone, Flower Hill, Saturday afternoon, when Mr. Walter Ledrew of Change Islands, was united in holy bonds of matrimony, to Miss Ida Smith of Trinity Bay, the Rev. Mr. Haden performing the ceremony. The room was supported by Mr. E. Sampson, and the bride was attended by Miss Lilian Stone, friend of the bride. Quite a few friends and relatives of the contracting parties were present at the ceremony. The bride was given away by Capt. Ledrew, brother of the groom, was prettily dressed in blue crepe de chine with white to match and carried a bouquet of sweet peas and maiden hair fern. The dress of the bridesmaid being the georgette with large picture hat. After the ceremony the guests were entertained with music by Mrs. (Rev.) Haden; after which refreshments were partaken of. The contracting parties were the recipients of many pretty presents. After supper being served the bride and groom "amid showers of rice" left with some of the guests for a drive around the Lake from thence to the train, en route to Killarney where the honeymoon will be spent, after which they will proceed to Change Islands, their future home.
