BUFFALO HABREWS INVEST IN GREEN GOODS."

When the Vallse Was Opened a Dead Cat Was Found and the Two Victims

New York, Nov. 21.-Any one who ks that the exposures made through of contributing to the new loan. York can obtain information to the to be about equal to last year's. prothe Lexow Committee have put an end iam Travers Jerome, who has as clients two investors in "green goods," who when they found they had been swindled fell over together in a fit.

Doctors revived them with much trouble, but the man with the weaker constitution is still in hysterics in a Canal-street hotel watched by a nurse at $3 a day. The other fellow is wandering about the city trying to buy a cheap pedestrian map covering the country between New York and Buffalo, $160. That is because "Green Goods" King McNally, head of the trust, has been disconcerted and is not in charge of the monopoly at present.

Got a Valise. The rabbi and his partner met the "green goods" men, and for $300 got a valise, said to contain counterfeit money to the amount of $3000. But the swindlers so scared the rabbi that he didn't lers so scared the rabbi that he didn't know whether he was standing on his heels or his head.

"We are watched," said they, "so let us dissemble. If the train on which you sail is stopped and troops or policemen surround it, throw the valise containing the wealth out of the window. Then reluse to talk. On arriving at a telegraph office wire us the particulars and I will telegraph you back your $300."

"Hist!" exclaimed the rabbi, mysteriously. "We understand." Then all hands winked at one another, and the devilish plot was consummated.

plot was consummated. Suddenly a man at the window of th "joint at which the deal was carried out yelled, "There's Superintendent Byrnes across the street, talking to the chief detective of the Assay Office. There are nine policemen looming up in the offing. Let us scoot."

Let us scoot."

Trembling and horrified, the rabbi and the partner who had provided the cash to offset the rabbi's brains botted into the street. They made their way to the railroad station and prepared to return to Buffalo to spend their "green goods."

They had purchased clergymen's tickets at half rates, and before returning to Buffalo they were required by the contract to call on the ticket agent and have themselves identified. When they timidly presented the return halves the ticket seller said fiercely:

"Sign frour names on the tickets. ller said fiercely:
"Sign Four names on the tickets, please."

The tone of his voice alarmed them. "We must be discovered," said the rab-bi's friend.

The agent hadn't time to notice the dough-colored faces, but they thought that they saw suspicion in his every feaof Canal-street, heating all records. Then they counted their money, Their pockets contained $4.50. That wouldn't take them back to Buffalo.

"We've got $3000 in the grip," said the rabbi. "I guess that'll buy us tickets to Buffalo and parlor car seats, too."

"But we weren't to open it till we got home," replied his companion. "You know we promised."

"Oh that describt count!" the rabbi.

"Oh, that doesn't count!" the rabbi replied. "This is a case of necessity. Let's go to the hotel and open the grip." Opened the Bag.

They returned to the Canal-street hotel.
They locked the door, pulled down the blinds and with some difficulty pried open the bag. It contained a cobblestone and a dead cat, with a label round its neck bearing the inscription, "Ah, there!"

there!"
"And we saw them put $3000 in that very grip," yelled the rabbi. Then he fainted. When the other man realized what had happened, he fainted, too. The rabbi, who called on Lawyer Jerome yesterday, said he believes his friend will die, of grief at the loss of his capital. He was strapped down to his bed had was watched by a nurse, armed with a nightstick, when the rabbi left him. Lawyer Jerome took the affidavit of the rabbi and then sent him to Police the rabbi and then sent him to Police

The worst of it is that the responsible member of the "green goods" acquiring expedition is a Hebrew rabbi. Hic companion is the leading member of his flock. The rabbi received a "green goods" circular, and he confided its contents to his friend who furnished a capital of $300, the rabbi agreeing to provide the party with the brains necessary to carry out the scheme. Sol fan the rabbi seems to be ahead in the deal.

Armed with the name and telegraphic address of the alleged dealer in counterfeit money, these worthies disguised themselves and left the sunny meadows of their native Buffalo and came to Canalstreet. Since Mr. Lexow began to be inquisitive fin this vicinity the "green goods" business has been on the wane, and bundles of paper wrapped around bricks can be had at lower rates than ever before. In fact, a countryman can buy three cents' worth of brick and half a cent's worth of newspapers, packed securely in a 90c. valise, for as low as $160. That is because "Greeg Goods" King McNally, head of the trust. has $150 King McNally, head of the trust.

The agent was a little non-plussed, Then, grabbing the tickets and putting them in a pigeon hole, he observed:
"It's mys opinion that you're a couple of frauds. Clergymen who can't write don't travel on this line at half rates. I guess you stole these tickets, and I'll hold them for further orders."
The rabbi and his friend got away from the station as quickly as they could. They ran about two miles in the direction of Canal-street, heating all records. Then
