

der. Fruit.

not received, per call
New York,
Globe, F. L. CURR,
John:

properties for
TO LET.

House, Stores and own of St. Andrews,
Jones property,
se. Out-houses and formerly known as

in St. James, about
1. Milltown, St. Ste.

St. Patrick, strong-
ws & Quebec Rail-in which, or in its all be established as a materially enhanced

within five minutes
Andrews, a neighborly State. If not
I will be glad to
in the purposes, and extended.

to announce to the d by Lodge, which
South of Chmbeck,
in the Building Lots
It is evident, that
d passing through it convenient harbor
to vessels of the
the smallest and un-which, there are terious, with others of proprietors and on the
the office operator,
of the most desirable
British North America
Capehart, the Mer-
I view of which are offered to the public.

FITZGERALD,
No. 33, 1852

ICE

best supplied by Messrs
to be left on the first

H. H. HATCH.

LONDON
STOUT

DRY WINE & C.
No. 1852

LONDON, No. St.

RECEIVED
at 55, Bress, London
and Life Aie,
Riverside in Geneva,
on Wine,
ca Rumi
from the Clyde:
hisky.

J. W. STREET,
2, 1852.

ICE

to sell all the ice in the season, late of the 25th day of granted by the
the said County, to Administrator of all the above is and credits responsibility for the purpose.

of which appointed, and con-of the part of
to Alexander in the George, and which de-said Nevil Thomson is her the late Ebenezer said lot is bounded as
by land granted to the East by land owner; Northern by land vicinal; and Southern vicinal, (so called) and the same conveyed to the said Alexander McVicar,
is hereby given, that as Administrator as above, under and by virtue of Public Auction, on the 15th of December next,
at the Homestead, on 25th October, 1852,

JOHN McNICHOL, Administrator

Law Paint Oil.

derness" from Hull:
Boiled and Raw Lin
just received
J. W. STREET.

1852

1852

1852

1852

1852

1852

1852

1852

1852

The Standard,
PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY, BY
W. W. Smith.
At his Office, Water Street, Saint Andrews, N. B.
TERMS.
12s. 6d. per annum—if paid in advance.
15s. if not paid until the end of the year.
ADVERTISEMENTS
Inserted according to written orders or continued at the discretion of the printer.
Each insertion of 12 lines and under 3s.
First insertion of 12 lines and under 1s.
Each repetition of 12 lines 1d. per line
Each repetition of 12 lines 1d. per line
Advertising by the year as may be agreed on

The Standard,

OR RAILWAY AND COMMERCIAL RECORD.

No. 49 SAINT ANDREWS, N. B., WEDNESDAY, DEC. 7, 1852. [Vol. 20

LAW RESPECTING NEWSPAPERS

Subscribers who do not give express notice to the contrary, are considered as wishing to continue their subscriptions. If subscribers order the discontinuance of their papers, the publisher may continue to send them till all arrears are paid. If subscribers neglect or refuse to take their papers from the office to which they are directed, they are held responsible till they have notified their Bill, and ordered their papers to be discontinued. If subscribers remove to other places without informing the publisher, and the paper is sent to the former direction, they are held responsible.

THE STANDARD.

THE LATE COLLISION FINE RIVER RAILROAD.

From late Boston papers, we learn the following additional particulars respecting the late unfortunate accident on the Fall River Railroad. It is stated that the fireman was running the Bridgewater train, the engine being temporarily absent in the baggage cars. The signals to back up were either misunderstood or incorrectly given, for the speed of the train was not materially checked, though the fireman whose name is Reynolds, manfully retained his position to the last. The alarm was given and some of the passengers had time to jump from the train before the collision occurred. The engine of the Bridgewater train passed two thirds of the way through the last car of the steam boat train, breaking it in two and burying the passengers remaining (about ten or a dozen) in a mass at the end. The stove of the car run into had been upset, and as the packings of shavings which are between the floors of the car were scattered about, there was great danger that the car would get on fire, and burn up those who were buried in the fragments, still alive and uttering fearful cries for help. The conductor Mr. Cliffin, attempted to enter the car, but the steam and smoke was so thick and intense that he was obliged to retreat. Axes were then procured and a hole made in the side of the car, through which water was passed in and the fire put out.

Every effort possible was then made to dig out the wounded from the mass of seats and other fragments of the car, with which they were covered. The screams of one man, Rex, Mr. Foster, were heard, and Mr. Cliffin saw his hands above the fragments, and so near the boiler that it seemed impossible for him to live. An attempt was made to pull him out, but this being unsuccessful they commenced to dig away the rubbish and after working for over fifteen minutes he was reached and taken out. He was badly scalded. In all, five passengers were got out badly scalded, and taken to the nearest house, where physicians were called, and they were all doing well.

We learn from the Traveller that the passengers of the train held a meeting after reaching the boat, at Fall River, exculpating Mr. Cliffin, the conductor, and others of the steamboat train, from all blame in the matter. Mr. Cliffin did all in his power to prevent the accident, and after it had occurred was unremitting in his efforts to rescue and aid the wounded passengers.

The passengers who were seriously injured were kindly provided for by citizens of Stoughton and North Bridgewater.

We notice that the Medical Society of Virginia, recommend that all the Coroners of the State, should be well informed, regularly educated, and licensed Doctors of Medicine. A wise recommendation and one worthy of adoption in the Provinces, for there is no one better adapted for the office of Coroner, than a good doctor.

Mr. Justice Meredith, in the Supreme Court at Quebec, decided that the operator of a telegraph company, cannot be compelled to divulge in a court of justice, the contents of telegraphic despatch received nor sent by him.

How we printers do lie, as our devil said the morning when he got up late yesterday morning to breakfast.

A Frenchman got exceedingly angry with a waiter at a hotel. "You rascal," exclaimed he, "I will blow your nose for you."

"How do you get such a fever?" Lever, yes.

"I have to leave her once a week at the watch maker's for repairs."

"My German friend how long have you been married?" "Well, dis is a think that I seldom don't like to talk about, but von I does it seems so long that it never was."

In a country paper a day or two days ago, after a long list of births, marriages and deaths, appears the following strange notice—"Several deaths unavoidably deferred until next week."

A blithe heave makes a blooming visage True! but it won't do to suppose that every

THE STANDARD.

THE LATE COLLISION FINE RIVER RAILROAD.

From late Boston papers, we learn the following additional particulars respecting the late unfortunate accident on the Fall River Railroad. It is stated that the fireman was running the Bridgewater train, the engine being temporarily absent in the baggage cars. The signals to back up were either misunderstood or incorrectly given, for the speed of the train was not materially checked, though the fireman whose name is Reynolds, manfully retained his position to the last. The alarm was given and some of the passengers had time to jump from the train before the collision occurred. The engine of the Bridgewater train passed two thirds of the way through the last car of the steam boat train, breaking it in two and burying the passengers remaining (about ten or a dozen) in a mass at the end. The stove of the car run into had been upset, and as the packings of shavings which are between the floors of the car were scattered about, there was great danger that the car would get on fire, and burn up those who were buried in the fragments, still alive and uttering fearful cries for help. The conductor Mr. Cliffin, attempted to enter the car, but the steam and smoke was so thick and intense that he was obliged to retreat. Axes were then procured and a hole made in the side of the car, through which water was passed in and the fire put out.

Every effort possible was then made to dig out the wounded from the mass of seats and other fragments of the car, with which they were covered. The screams of one man, Rex, Mr. Foster, were heard, and Mr. Cliffin saw his hands above the fragments, and so near the boiler that it seemed impossible for him to live. An attempt was made to pull him out, but this being unsuccessful they commenced to dig away the rubbish and after working for over fifteen minutes he was reached and taken out. He was badly scalded. In all, five passengers were got out badly scalded, and taken to the nearest house, where physicians were called, and they were all doing well.

We learn from the Traveller that the passengers of the train held a meeting after reaching the boat, at Fall River, exculpating Mr. Cliffin, the conductor, and others of the steamboat train, from all blame in the matter. Mr. Cliffin did all in his power to prevent the accident, and after it had occurred was unremitting in his efforts to rescue and aid the wounded passengers.

The passengers who were seriously injured were kindly provided for by citizens of Stoughton and North Bridgewater.

We notice that the Medical Society of Virginia, recommend that all the Coroners of the State, should be well informed, regularly educated, and licensed Doctors of Medicine. A wise recommendation and one worthy of adoption in the Provinces, for there is no one better adapted for the office of Coroner, than a good doctor.

Mr. Justice Meredith, in the Supreme Court at Quebec, decided that the operator of a telegraph company, cannot be compelled to divulge in a court of justice, the contents of telegraphic despatch received nor sent by him.

How we printers do lie, as our devil said the morning when he got up late yesterday morning to breakfast.

A Frenchman got exceedingly angry with a waiter at a hotel. "You rascal," exclaimed he, "I will blow your nose for you."

"How do you get such a fever?" Lever, yes.

"I have to leave her once a week at the watch maker's for repairs."

"My German friend how long have you been married?" "Well, dis is a think that I seldom don't like to talk about, but von I does it seems so long that it never was."

In a country paper a day or two days ago, after a long list of births, marriages and deaths, appears the following strange notice—"Several deaths unavoidably deferred until next week."

A blithe heave makes a blooming visage True! but it won't do to suppose that every blooming visage comes from a jolly condition of the heart. The cause sometimes lies deeper than that—in the cellar.

THINGS TALKED ABOUT.

Danger should be feared when distant, and heaved when present.

It is said the most in favour among unmarried ladies is—Beauche.

An imposing sight—the sight of your bill, at nine tenths at least of our hotels.

Shame—a feeling that overtakes people, not because they have done wrong, but because they have been found out.

In a government maintained by the arm of power, there is no certainty of duration; but one cemented by mutual kindness, all the best feelings of the heart are enlisted in its support.

A man in California, under sentence of death, by hanging, asked the Sheriff the evening previous to the execution—"I say Sheriff, what hour is that little affair of mine to come off?"

Courtesy is the only true mark of nobility.

The man of "vanishing ambition" has joined the circus.

It is not of judgment not to see danger, but it is stupidity or rashness not to fear it.

There are three things you should never take—a cold, a lady's character, or your neighbor's umbrella.

The best cough drops for young ladies is to drop the practice of dressing thin when they go into the night air.

The villain who was charged with passing counterfeit copper coins, has been sentenced to a life of penitence.

A cheerful manner generally denotes a good nature; whereas a sour countenance is a manifest sign of a bad disposition.

The man that has been engaged in building a castle in the air has come down, unfortunately having given out. We know some folks who could spare a supply.

Discrimination, even the most innocent, is ever productive of embarrassment; whether the design is evil or not, artifice is always dangerous, almost inevitably disgraceful.

THE STANDARD.

THE LATE COLLISION FINE RIVER RAILROAD.

From late Boston papers, we learn the following additional particulars respecting the late unfortunate accident on the Fall River Railroad. It is stated that the fireman was running the Bridgewater train, the engine being temporarily absent in the baggage cars. The signals to back up were either misunderstood or incorrectly given, for the speed of the train was not materially checked, though the fireman whose name is Reynolds, manfully retained his position to the last. The alarm was given and some of the passengers had time to jump from the train before the collision occurred. The engine of the Bridgewater train passed two thirds of the way through the last car of the steam boat train, breaking it in two and burying the passengers remaining (about ten or a dozen) in a mass at the end. The stove of the car run into had been upset, and as the packings of shavings which are between the floors of the car were scattered about, there was great danger that the car would get on fire, and burn up those who were buried in the fragments, still alive and uttering fearful cries for help. The conductor Mr. Cliffin, attempted to enter the car, but the steam and smoke was so thick and intense that he was obliged to retreat. Axes were then procured and a hole made in the side of the car, through which water was passed in and the fire put out.

Every effort possible was then made to dig out the wounded from the mass of seats and other fragments of the car, with which they were covered. The screams of one man, Rex, Mr. Foster, were heard, and Mr. Cliffin saw his hands above the fragments, and so near the boiler that it seemed impossible for him to live. An attempt was made to pull him out, but this being unsuccessful they commenced to dig away the rubbish and after working for over fifteen minutes he was reached and taken out. He was badly scalded. In all, five passengers were got out badly scalded, and taken to the nearest house, where physicians were called, and they were all doing well.

We learn from the Traveller that the passengers of the train held a meeting after reaching the boat, at Fall River, exculpating Mr. Cliffin, the conductor, and others of the steamboat train, from all blame in the matter. Mr. Cliffin did all in his power to prevent the accident, and after it had occurred was unremitting in his efforts to rescue and aid the wounded passengers.

The passengers who were seriously injured were kindly provided for by citizens of Stoughton and North Bridgewater.

We notice that the Medical Society of Virginia, recommend that all the Coroners of the State, should be well informed, regularly educated, and licensed Doctors of Medicine. A wise recommendation and one worthy of adoption in the Provinces, for there is no one better adapted for the office of Coroner, than a good doctor.

Mr. Justice Meredith, in the Supreme Court at Quebec, decided that the operator of a telegraph company, cannot be compelled to divulge in a court of justice, the contents of telegraphic despatch received nor sent by him.

How we printers do lie, as our devil said the morning when he got up late yesterday morning to breakfast.

A Frenchman got exceedingly angry with a waiter at a hotel. "You rascal," exclaimed he, "I will blow your nose for you."

"How do you get such a fever?" Lever, yes.

"I have to leave her once a week at the watch maker's for repairs."

"My German friend how long have you been married?" "Well, dis is a think that I seldom don't like to talk about, but von I does it seems so long that it never was."

In a country paper a day or two days ago, after a long list of births, marriages and deaths, appears the following strange notice—"Several deaths unavoidably deferred until next week."

A blithe heave makes a blooming visage True! but it won't do to suppose that every blooming visage comes from a jolly condition of the heart. The cause sometimes lies deeper than that—in the cellar.

THINGS TALKED ABOUT.

Danger should be feared when distant, and heaved when present.

It is said the most in favour among unmarried ladies is—Beauche.

An imposing sight—the sight of your bill, at nine tenths at least of our hotels.

Shame—a feeling that overtakes people, not because they have done wrong, but because they have been found out.

In a government maintained by the arm of power, there is no certainty of duration; but one cemented by mutual kindness, all the best feelings of the heart are enlisted in its support.

A man in California, under sentence of death, by hanging, asked the Sheriff the evening previous to the execution—"I say Sheriff, what hour is that little affair of mine to come off?"

Courtesy is the only true mark of nobility.

The man of "vanishing ambition" has joined the circus.

It is not of judgment not to see danger, but it is stupidity or rashness not to fear it.

There are three things you should never take—a cold, a lady's character, or your neighbor's umbrella.

The best cough drops for young ladies is to drop the practice of dressing thin when they go into the night air.

The villain who was charged with passing counterfeit copper coins, has been sentenced to a life of penitence.

A cheerful manner generally denotes a good nature; whereas a sour countenance is a manifest sign of a bad disposition.

The man that has been engaged in building a castle in the air has come down, unfortunately having given out. We know some folks who could spare a supply.

Discrimination, even the most innocent, is ever productive of embarrassment; whether the design is evil or not, artifice is always dangerous, almost inevitably disgraceful.

THE STANDARD.

THE LATE COLLISION FINE RIVER RAILROAD.

From late Boston papers, we learn the following additional particulars respecting the late unfortunate accident on the Fall River Railroad. It is stated that the fireman was running the Bridgewater train, the engine being temporarily absent in the baggage cars. The signals to back up were either misunderstood or incorrectly given, for the speed of the train was not materially checked, though the fireman whose name is Reynolds, manfully retained his position to the last. The alarm was given and some of the passengers had time to jump from the train before the collision occurred. The engine of the Bridgewater train passed two thirds of the way through the last car of the steam boat train, breaking it in two and burying the passengers remaining (about ten or a dozen) in a mass at the end. The stove of the car run into had been upset, and as the packings of shavings which are between the floors of the car were scattered about, there was great danger that the car would get on fire, and burn up those who were buried in the fragments, still alive and uttering fearful cries for help. The conductor Mr. Cliffin, attempted to enter the car, but the steam and smoke was so thick and intense that he was obliged to retreat. Axes were then procured and a hole made in the side of the car, through which water was passed in and the fire put out.

Every effort possible was then made to dig out the wounded from the mass of seats and other fragments of the car, with which they were covered. The screams of one man, Rex, Mr. Foster, were heard, and Mr. Cliffin saw his hands above the fragments, and so near the boiler that it seemed impossible for him to live. An attempt was made to pull him out, but this being unsuccessful they commenced to dig away the rubbish and after working for over fifteen minutes he was reached and taken out. He was badly scalded. In all, five passengers were got out badly scalded, and taken to the nearest house, where physicians were called, and they were all doing well.

We learn from the Traveller that the passengers of the train held a meeting after reaching the boat, at Fall River, exculpating Mr. Cliffin, the conductor, and others of the steamboat train, from all blame in the matter. Mr. Cliffin did all in his power to prevent the accident, and after it had occurred was unremitting in his efforts to rescue and aid the wounded passengers.

The passengers who were seriously injured were kindly provided for by citizens of Stoughton and North Bridgewater.

We notice that the Medical Society of Virginia, recommend that all the Coroners of the State, should be well informed, regularly educated, and licensed Doctors of Medicine. A wise recommendation and one worthy of adoption in the Provinces, for there is no one better adapted for the office of Coroner, than a good doctor.

Mr. Justice Meredith, in the Supreme Court at Quebec, decided that the operator of a telegraph company, cannot be compelled to divulge in a court of justice, the contents of telegraphic despatch received nor sent by him.

How we printers do lie, as our devil said the morning when he got up late yesterday morning to breakfast.

A Frenchman got exceedingly angry with a waiter at a hotel. "You rascal," exclaimed he, "I will blow your nose for you."

"How do you get such a fever?" Lever, yes.

"I have to leave her once a week at the watch maker's for repairs."

"My German friend how long have you been married?" "Well, dis is a think that I seldom don't like to talk about, but von I does it seems so long that it never was."

In a country paper a day or two days ago, after a long list of births, marriages and deaths, appears the following strange notice—"Several deaths unavoidably deferred until next week."

A blithe heave makes a blooming visage True! but it won't do to suppose that every blooming visage comes from a jolly condition of the heart. The cause sometimes lies deeper than that—in the cellar.

THINGS TALKED ABOUT.

Danger should be feared when distant, and heaved when present.

It is said the most in favour among unmarried ladies is—Beauche.

An imposing sight—the sight of your bill, at nine tenths at least of our hotels.

Shame—a feeling that overtakes people, not because they have done wrong, but because they have been found out.

In a government maintained by the arm of power, there is no certainty of duration; but one cemented by mutual kindness, all the best feelings of the heart are enlisted in its support.

A man in California, under sentence of death, by hanging, asked the Sheriff the evening previous to the execution—"I say Sheriff, what hour is that little affair of mine to come off?"

Courtesy is the only true mark of nobility.

The man of "vanishing ambition" has joined the circus.

It is not of judgment not to see danger, but it is stupidity or rashness not to fear it.

There are three things you should never take—a cold, a lady's character, or your neighbor's umbrella.

The best cough drops for young ladies is to drop the practice of dressing thin when they go into the night air.

The villain who was charged with passing counterfeit copper coins, has been sentenced to a life of penitence.

A cheerful manner generally denotes a good nature; whereas a sour countenance is a manifest sign of a bad disposition.

The man that has been engaged in building a castle in the air has come down, unfortunately having given out. We know some folks who could spare a supply.

Discrimination, even the most innocent, is ever productive of embarrassment; whether the design is evil or not, artifice is always dangerous, almost inevitably disgraceful.

THE STANDARD.

THE LATE COLLISION FINE RIVER RAILROAD.

From late Boston papers, we learn the following additional particulars respecting the late unfortunate accident on the Fall River Railroad. It is stated that the fireman was running the Bridgewater train, the engine being temporarily absent in the baggage cars. The signals to back up were either misunderstood or incorrectly given, for the speed of the train was not materially checked, though the fireman whose name is Reynolds, manfully retained his position to the last. The alarm was given and some of the passengers had time to jump from the train before the collision occurred. The engine of the Bridgewater train passed two thirds of the way through the last car of the steam boat train, breaking it in two and burying the passengers remaining (about ten or a dozen) in a mass at the end. The stove of the car run into had been upset, and as the packings of shavings which are between the floors of the car were scattered about, there was great danger that the car would get on fire, and burn up those who were buried in the fragments, still alive and uttering fearful cries for help. The conductor Mr. Cliffin, attempted to enter the car, but the steam and smoke was so thick and intense that he was obliged to retreat. Axes were then procured and a hole made in the side of the car, through which water was passed in and the fire put out.

Every effort possible was then made to dig out the wounded from the mass of seats and other fragments of the car, with which they were covered. The screams of one man, Rex, Mr. Foster, were heard, and Mr. Cliffin saw his hands above the fragments, and so near the boiler that it seemed impossible for him to live. An attempt was made to pull him out, but this being unsuccessful they commenced to dig away the rubbish and after working for over fifteen minutes he was reached and taken out. He was badly scalded. In all, five passengers were got out badly scalded, and taken to the nearest house, where physicians were called, and they were all doing well.

We learn from the Traveller that the passengers of the train held a meeting after reaching the boat, at Fall River, exculpating Mr. Cliffin, the conductor, and others of the steamboat train, from all blame in the matter. Mr. Cliffin did all in his power to prevent the accident, and after it had occurred was unremitting in his efforts to rescue and aid the wounded passengers.

The passengers who were seriously injured were kindly provided for by citizens of Stoughton and North Bridgewater.

We notice that the Medical Society of Virginia, recommend that all the Coroners of the State, should be well informed, regularly educated, and licensed Doctors of Medicine. A wise recommendation and one worthy of adoption in the Provinces, for there is no one better adapted for the office of Coroner, than a good doctor.

Mr. Justice Meredith, in the Supreme Court at Quebec, decided that the operator of a telegraph company, cannot be compelled to divulge in a court of justice, the contents of telegraphic despatch received nor sent by him.

How we printers do lie, as our devil said the morning when he got up late yesterday morning to breakfast.

A Frenchman got exceedingly angry with a waiter at a hotel. "You rascal," exclaimed he, "I will blow your nose for you."

"How do you get such a fever?" Lever, yes.

"I have to leave her once a week at the watch maker's for repairs."

"My German friend how long have you been married?" "Well, dis is a think that I seldom don't like to talk about, but von I does it seems so long that it never was."

In a country paper a day or two days ago, after a long list of births, marriages and deaths, appears the following strange notice—"Several deaths unavoidably deferred until next week."

A blithe heave makes a blooming visage True! but it won't do to suppose that every blooming visage comes from a jolly condition of the heart. The cause sometimes lies deeper than that—in the cellar.

THINGS TALKED ABOUT.

Danger should be feared when distant, and heaved when present.

It is said the most in favour among unmarried ladies is—Beauche.

An imposing sight—the sight of your bill, at nine tenths at least of our hotels.

Shame—a feeling that overtakes people, not because they have done wrong, but because they have been found out.

In a government maintained by the arm of power, there is no certainty of duration; but one cemented by mutual kindness, all the best feelings of the heart are enlisted in its support.

A man in California, under sentence of death, by hanging, asked the Sheriff the evening previous to the execution—"I say Sheriff, what hour is that little affair of mine to come off?"

Courtesy is the only true mark of nobility.

The man of "vanishing ambition" has joined the circus.

It is not of judgment not to see danger, but it is stupidity or rashness not to fear it.

There are three things you should never take—a cold, a lady's character, or your neighbor's umbrella.

The best cough drops for young ladies is to drop the practice of dressing thin when they go into the night air.

The villain who was charged with passing counterfeit copper coins, has been sentenced to a life of penitence.

A cheerful manner generally denotes a good nature; whereas a sour countenance is a manifest sign of a bad disposition.