Cows and Cavies.

PROF. JAS. W. ROBERTSON AT A DIARY CONVENTION AT SEAFORTH, ONT.

A man's skill having settled that a cow can serve him and his skill having determined the peculiar character of the cow that can serve him best, he will expect that she will do her best for him. A cow always boards on some man or some woman. Did you ever think of that? For myself I would not like to have ten men baarding on me who would not pay for their food; in fact I could not afford to have ten men any table, five of whom paid their board, while five did not. What would I do with the five that did not pay? If I were a politician—which I probably never will be—I would get those five cows or men who did not pay their board to board on the other party. That is successful party politicis. If I have ten cows in my stable they really board on me as truly as these ten men at my table. But the fact remains that nearly half of our boasted 750,000 cows board on some citizen and neglect or forget to pay in full for their board. The cows that pay for their board are the cows having power to keep their accounts straight that pay for their board are the cows hav-Saltest Water on Earth.

with the man whose food they eat. I would get a cow for a threefold purposefor the purpose of getting milk at a profit, Lake of Urumia, in Persia, situated more ing power to keep their accounts straight for the purpose of getting valuable calves and for the purpose of making rich beef, so that I would have no waste and loss so far as the life of this animal was concerned.

Now suppose I begin at the other end. If long and 24 miles broad, and its northern Now suppose I begin at the other end. If long and 24 miles broad, and its northern I keep a cow for the beef that she can coasts are encrusted with a border of salt make, for the calves she can drop, and for the milk that she can yield, I will find no living thing can survive in it, except a cleven times out of twelve that the whole small species of jelly fish. It is very shall three do not leave me as much as the cow took from me. If I want beef at a profit I conclude that the calf that drinks all the milk his mother gives, costs more for every pound of beef he carries three times over than I can get for that beef. If I get a dairy cow for beef from her own carcass, I may board her at a loss for eight or ten years, for the pleasure of having some two or three hundred pounds extra of old-cow beef that costs me four times what it is worth. Then since the second object that I am seeking to attain in keeping cows is to get valuable calves at a profit, I will find out the time of year that I can raise them to the most advantage. In this province three do not leave me as much as the cow low.

to the most advantage. In this province that period lies between October and April. When a man rears calves in the summer a day they are called up, and as a rule, get When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria, supply of sour milk. Summer Fallowing. The bare fallow is a very expensive mode of cleaning land. When soils are heavy and where root and other hoed crops can not be grown, it may be necessary sometimes to resort to it. When there is a necessity for this, the effort should be made to try in some way to improve the land in fertility, and to improve it also mechanically, that is to improve it also mechanically.
