and where the seed has missed this should be done. Roads are drying up but the mud holes remain and the creeks are still high. The ground which was dry for years has become completely soaked, years has become completely soaked, and the sloughs and creeks need not be looked for to dry up as in former years even with the coming of any weather. Improvements will be needed that were not thought of in former that were not thought of in former years. But after all the rain, although not all good, has done more good than harm. The country has become very dry. So dry that surface water was becoming scarce, and the luxuriance of vegetation, for which the district is or vegetation, for which the district is noted, was becoming less marked. The renewal of moisture ensures a contin-uance of luxuriant growth, even dur-ing dry seasons, which to the stranger arriving in those seasons seems unac-countable.—Edmonton Bulletin.
