

EXTRAITS DE LA PRESSE DES ETATS-UNIS.

L'ECHO DE LA FRANCE.—A very interesting and well edited periodical, with this title, is issued, twice a month, at Montreal, Canada, by Louis Ricard. Its aim and scope may be best described by stating that it does, in the sphere of French literature, what "Every Saturday," "Littell's Living Age," and "The Eclectic," do for English literature. To persons who wish to keep au courant of French and European thought and discussion, without the trouble of wading through a multiplicity of publications, this compilation will prove a desideratum.—Home Journal, N. Y.

L'ECHO DE LA FRANCE.—This excellent Review, devoted to the reproduction of all that is most worthy of notice in the religious, political or moral literature of the old world, carries out to the fullest extent the promises of the prospectus, and already we have one volume of most interesting and valuable reading matter. "The Conferences of the Rev. Father Hyacinthe at Notre Dame;" the articles on celebrated members of the French Academy; fragments from the journal of Eugénie de Guérin, always charming; "Rome," "Philosophy," "Lord Palmerston," "Father Lacordaire and Madame Swetchine." Politics and current events all receive their due attention, and by all who read French this Review will be welcomed with delight. Every effort to supply the place of objectionable reading by that which will elevate while it furnishes entertainment, should meet with encouragement, and we hope for this work a wide circulation.—New York.

L'ECHO DE LA FRANCE.—This publication is edited by Louis Ricard, and published in the French language at Montreal, Canada. A very choice and interesting summary is embodied, generally compiled from the French journals and periodicals. We have been struck with the ability of many of the papers.—Wide World, Boston.

L'ECHO DE LA FRANCE.—It would be difficult to find a more choice and varied selection of desirable reading than the contents of Volume, II. of this well-conducted Review. Its future success has been secured by the indefatigable endeavors of the editor to place before its readers only the crème de la crème of the literature of the day. The contributions from the writings and speeches of the Bishop of Orleans; of Father Hyacinthe, the Bossuet of the present day; H. Audeval, Emile Richebourg, Eugene Veuillot, Anatole Coutris, and V. D. Jacques, some of the most profound writers and thinkers of the present day, with a judicious mixture of poetry and light reading, make it all that could be desired for the drawing-room or library wherever the French language is either understood or studied.—New York Tablet.

L'ECHO DE LA FRANCE.—This is a very excellent Monthly, published in Montreal, and contains much reading particularly interesting to Catholics.—Catholic Mirror, Baltimore.

L'ECHO DE LA FRANCE.—With the November number this Periodical (one of our most valued exchanges) closes the first year and third volume of its existence. It is published in Montreal, and edited by Mr. Louis Ricard, a learned member of the Montreal bar, a gentleman personally well known to the writer, and who has shown by the success that has attended this new periodical, that he is well fitted for the delicate and difficult task of the editor of an Eclectic Magazine.

L'Echo de la France presents to its readers monthly one hundred and fifty pages of choice matter, selected from the most valuable periodical literature of France. It is handsomely printed. Its editor is a Catholic of sound education and refined literary taste. The labor with him is a labor of love, undertaken from the same motives which led to the publication of the Catholic World, of which it is a worthy companion.

To those who desire to form or keep up an acquaintance with the best French literature of the day, we highly recommend this Review. They can in no other way, for so small an expenditure, keep posted in the literature of the French language. Catholic families in which French is spoken, or of which any of the members are learning French, will find L'Echo de la France a most welcome and useful visitor. It should have many subscribers here.—The Guardian, St. Louis, Mis.
