It will, as your good melody intimates, help ye to get through your day's work well; and it will serve to drive away evil thoughts and temptation. You have just been acting up to Newton's advice. His advice was, 'When you rise in the morning take care to fill your sack quite full of corn, so that there may not be left any room for the devil to come and put in his chaff.' Those who lie in bed late, and then have to proceed to their work 'all hurry and scurry and drive,' without having time to think of God, pray to Him, or meditate upon His Word, always go to their work with empty sacks, and Satan has the whole day before him to fill them with the chaff of his temptation. I should say, Edward, you would rather have your sack fill with good corn than with chaff. a
