Some dozen pens were found occu-pled by from two to ten cattle, whereas their capacity is twenty at least. It was not a busy market day, but had it been these pens would have had to be considered as full and dealers would have had to look cisewhere. Lessee Hodgson chaims he has been misunderstood when he was quoted as fault and dealers would have had to look cisewhere were last year at the outside not more than ten days when the market had failed to accommodate the trade. These days, he said, had been Fridays, upon which days the market suffers from the ac-cumulations of the week. But the over-congestion was all due, he said, to the lack of tie-ups. These, he said, with a meaning smile, were a little objectionable to some exporters, but involved a saving in hay, as well as space.
