

twenty-one candidates, most of whom were scholars in that school.

The Principal of the Feller Institute will tell you what he and his associates have done in that School, and what a blessing it has proved to many, both English and French. He could also tell you how much too small was the largest room of the Institute on the evening of the Anniversary of the students last February at Grande Ligne, what an uncomfortable place that basement dining room is, where more than a hundred pupils crowd to get a hearty meal, how much an enlargement in the shape of a wing is needed for that ever growing institution, and what noble efforts in contributions towards it the Society of Students has made. It is worth going a long distance to see the beautiful, inspiring sight of many of those old and new students crowding that building on their festal day. Imagine their going back to their homes, their village, their parish, taking light, culture, and religious principles with them; but who can measure the influence it will have in ages to come on Protestantism over this whole Continent? This is the burden of our work.

COLPORTAGE AND EVANGELISTIC WORK.

In addition to the regular pastoral work of our Ministers, who are more or less evangelists, the Mission has, during the past year, carried on an extensive work of Colportage and Evangelization. Colportage work has been carried on during the whole year by Mr. Rouleau in Manitoba with some success, and during the summer months by Messrs. Vien on the south side of the St. Lawrence, and St. Germain and E. Roy in the Ottawa Valley. The Colporteurs, especially in the Province of Quebec, find that almost in every parish and settlement where they go they have been preceded by other agents, either Colporteurs of the Bible Society or some other missionary society, who have sold, loaned, or given copies of the Holy Scriptures. Some of the copies thus disposed of had been burned by order of the priest, who had told the possessors to have nothing to do with such books or their vendors. We suggest that the work of evangelization be emphasized and enlarged.
