Haynes.—When a revival of religion was in progress in his parish, and Satan gave intimations of dissatisfaction (as he is went to do at such times), some of his students, having been slandered for their zeal and activity, made their complaint to him of what they had suffered, and expected his sympathy and protection. After a pause, Mr. Haynes observed, "I knew all this before." "Why, then," said one "did you not inform us?" "Because," said he, "it was not worth communicating and I now tell you plainly, and once for all, my young friends, it is best to let the devil carry his own mail and hear its expenses."

"The Devil is Dead."—It is said that some time after the publication of Mr. Haynes's sermon on the text, "Thou shalt not surely die," two reckless youn men having agreed together to try his wit, one of them said "Father Haynes, hav you heard the good news?" "No," said he, "what is it?" "It is great news indeed," said the other; "and, if true, your business is done." "What is it?" agai inquired Mr. Haynes. "Why," said the first, "the devil is dead." In a momental and gentleman replied, "Oh, poor fatherless children! what will become of you?
