SPORT NEWS GLEANED FROM WORLD'S CENTRES

FANS' CONFIDENCE MUST BE RESTORED

Say Baseball Scandal is Now Up to Commissioner Landis.

Chicago, Oct. 27.—(United Press).—Since another big baseball scandal popped up with the discovery that two members of the New York Giants had made overtures to another player to throw a game, some curiosity has arisen as to what baseball, as it is represented by the advisory council, will do about it.

Some fear is being expressed that the heads of the game will prefer to let it die out rather than to press vigorously, and give the fans more assurance than they have been given that it was a foolish move originated by Coby Dolan and carried out by Jimmy O'Connell, and that other Giant players did not know that Heinie Sand was to be approached with an offer of $500 to throw a Philadelphia game to the Giants.

Under the conditions now it is entirely up to Commissioner Landis to do something that will restore public faith in a game that has not been entirely above suspicion since the White Sox showed in 1919 that all the players in baseball are not on the level.

Ban Johnson, American League member of the advisory council, is an open and declared member of Landis and John A. Heydler, the National League member of the council, has already given all his information to the commissioner.

Landis was given the job of commissioner of baseball with unlimited power for the sole purpose of cleaning up baseball and making it clean. It seemed that he succeeded when he kept the White Sox crooks from being reinstated, but baseball was saved in that crisis not as much by Landis as it was by Babe Ruth, who came along with a home run and turned conversation away from the scandal.

Some things have happened out in the testimony at Joe Jackson's suit for back salary that indicated that some of the big officials of the game were more about the crooked world's series than they admitted when they were firing out statements. "But no such thing is possible in baseball!"

This time when the Dolan-O'Connell thing threatened to ruin the game, the bright minds of the game did not make how terrible it was or how crooked they were about "the foulness of such a stupor."

Some fans are believing that "the great fight of the Washington Senators in the world's series had taken the public mind away from the scandal and that it would die out."

There are several reasons to believe, and these reasons are big men in the newspaper profession, that the scandal will not die out and that the only way proof will have to be shown before they can be convinced that Coby Dolan and Jimmy O'Connell were the only ones involved and before they can have themselves believed that "appalling stupidity" caused the scandal to be made to have the game thrown. There were other reasons, according to stories floating around, which indicated that some of the big officials of the game had won the championship by two games.

Commissioner Landis should be believed when he says that he is going to continue the investigation, because his integrity and his courage never have been questioned. Landis could not be blamed for the laxity with which organized baseball went after the 1919 crooks and he can't be blamed for the crooked work of Dolan and O'Connell. He can be held responsible, however, if he allows the public to believe that the case is being smoothed over. Mere statements to the effect that the scandal is being investigated will not satisfy the public that real efforts are being made to clean up baseball.

Suspicion of the New York Giants is not confined to New York. Giants fans throw down the team in the world's series and the public has the purpose that was too plainly apparent to be misunderstood. Washington, with a city full of rabid baseball fans and some club rosters, never recalled the scandal to the Giants, but New York fans did in every one of the three games played in New York.

The game distrust of the Giants and the belief that something is being hid from the public has been given to the public in the United States. The following clipping from the Montreal Star, which is being sent to the public, is a good example of the attitude of the public during the series games and the enthusiasm with which the reports were received.

"When it was known that Walter Johnson was in evidence again, a murmur of sympathy went through it, and when the final announcement was made that Senators had won, men danced around, jumped and waved and roared in a frenzy of delight, and many a hat was smashed in exhibitions of playful and joyous hysteria."

Even out of sympathy for Walter Johnson and admiration for Buck Harris and the game Washington team, the Giants could not have been thrown down as they were all over the country if the fans didn't have their suspicions about the whole team.

These McAdam C. P. R. Men Win Trophy

At the Place Viger Hotel, Montreal, last week, and for the first time since the war, first aid teams from McAdam, the Canadian Pacific Railway, to the C. P. R. centre of the St. John Ambulance Association for annual competition between the champion teams of Eastern and Western Lines, representing the championship of the system. The McAdam team (left of center) won the trophy, gaining 342 points out of a possible 450 while the Winnipeg team gained 323 points.

W. M. Neal, assistant to the vice-president of the company in presenting the company acted as judge. The competition, stated that since the Canadian, Pacific branch of the St. John Ambulance Association was formed in 1909, 21,000 employees have received instruction in first aid. The contestants are—Left to Right—Front Row: Reynolds, Winnipeg; Middle Row: C. Bogert and C. W. Lee, McAdam; Dr. H. A. Beatty, F. Perkins and E. G. Noble, instructor, Winnipeg. Back Row: W. F. Bailey, McAdam, E. J. Bull and H. Shaw, Winnipeg.

the players of implication in the scandal. When Landis says he is going to investigate the scandal to the very bottom, it is only just to do it, but it should not take too much time.

Baseball was saved because the fans weren't too curious in 1919, but they are curious now and they are suspicious. The longer they wait for some action the more suspicious they will become of the whole game.

HOCKEY REPORTS FROM NORTH SHORE

Campbellton's Plans are Still Uncertain—Chatham May Drop Out.

Campbellton, N. B., Oct. 27.—At present it appears that Campbellton will not be represented in the northern section of the New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island Hockey Association this winter.

No definite steps have been taken either to send a team representative to the meeting of the league or to get together a team. Several of last year's team have definitely stated that they will not don their hockey tops this winter and, although there are several of last year's intermediates who would not doubt be able to make a name for themselves in senior hockey, an impression prevails that there will not be any senior hockey seen here this winter and that the only games will be by teams entered in a town league.

Of course this is an old story in Campbellton and on the opening of the season the old timers have usually turned out, but this year it seems different.

What will happen the northern section of the league is unknown. Rumor has it that Chatham is completely out of the league, which would leave only Moncton, whose teams of last year are almost intact. Should there be a game of hockey here change their minds and get together Campbellton would be the first team on the league.

Therefore it is hoped that something will be done soon in order that Campbellton shall not be wiped off the map of Canada's national pastime after competing creditably against the best in the Maritime Provinces.

English Force Make Much Use of Photographs in Cases.
London, Oct. 27.—Today the police, as soon as they are called on to deal with a crime mystery, photograph the scene, in the case of a murder with all its details, is reproduced on a large scale.

This picture plays an important part in the reconstruction of the crime; but by no means the most important.

There are often particular portions of a room, or even an article of furniture, which are photographed. These are often developed and enlarged, and the results are often of great value in the investigation of a crime.

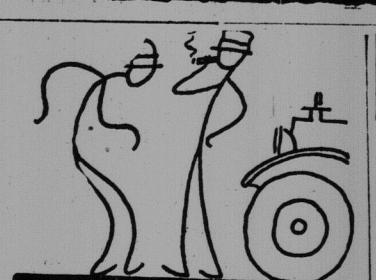

The photograph thus obtained is compared with the thousands of photographs which are kept in the fingerprint library of the Yard.

There are few more personal collections of photographs in existence than that which is kept at Scotland Yard. Here are records of every murder investigated during the last ten years or more, and no single detail is omitted.

Scotland Yard possesses the most up-to-date photographic department in the world. It can photograph and circulate with an hour's notice any number of the more delicate operation of photographing the minutest detail, as, for example, a broken chair or a blurred impression of a finger or thumb on a knife.

The "Yards" collection of known criminals runs into scores of thousands, and is daily being added to, for it not only includes British subjects, but international crooks who might be tempted to visit this country.

Between Scotland Yard and the police of America and the Continent there are constant "interchanges of photographs," by which means the Yard and the police of the world are able to keep track of "dangerous characters." Certain criminals have methods peculiar to themselves of "lacking a job." Particularly in this case with safe-breakers.

A detective called in to investigate a safe robbery immediately has the whole scene photographed, and the print is compared with others already in the Yard collection.

Thus the avenue of inquiry is narrowed, and the detective knows often at a glance the crime has been carried out by one or two known criminals specializing in safe robberies; and his next move is to discover where certain men were at the time of the crime.

SCOUTS VISIT CAVE

Two parties of Boy Scouts visited Howe's Cave on Saturday and removed a quantity of the stone, which have filled the entrance and piled them up at one side. A number of the boys passed the cooking and camp tests and earned additional badges.

PLAYERS INJURED

The injury of James, of the St. Andrews team, put something of a damp on the score game on the Barrack Green on Saturday afternoon when St. Andrews met a team from H. M. C. S. Patriot. The game was keenly contested and the teams were more evenly matched than the score of three to one in favor of the Patriot's team would indicate.
