Today We Resume Our Regular Fall Programme With

Dress Hats

In Attractive Modes That Assure Artful Costuming

Good taste and creative skill have been at work in fashioning these dress hats for Fall wear, They are ingenious adaptations of Parisienne models. The talent of master designers is expressed in the cunning of color, in the brims distinguished. by quip of quirk or graceful sweep and in the trim-mings which assist in giving every hat the quintessence of charm and individuality.

To his mind, this would not solve the problem, and he pressed for something more than mere co-operation, pointing out that financial assistance would be necessary. If it were proposed to get more traffic for the railways, the people of the provinces had a right to expect from the railway representatives admitted the force of the argument and expressed a readiness to aid in a substantial manner if a practical scheme were submitted. With this understanding, the Maritime Colonization and Development Association, with Mr. Schofield and Angus McLean as New Brunswick members of the executive, was organized.

Settlers on the Land.

With regard to putting more settlers on the land, Mr. Schofield has very decided opinions. The farmers do not want more competitors in their present limited market. To make competition keener would certainly not make farming attractive, or stop the drift away from the farms. To be a successful work hard, but be a very capable agriculturist.

This being true, Mr. Schofield would not induce people to settle on the land unless it were possible at the same time to ensure them a market. He believes it would be possible to secure a tract of land, place people there who would engage in the different branches of agriculture, provide factories and canneries which would take care of their whole surplus product; have the whole enterprise under competent executive management, provide the group settlement that would brighten the lives of the people, and so establish a settlement that would be permanent and a constant producer of wealth for the province.

Mr. Schofield says there are localities in this province where such settlements could be placed under ideal conditions. He would not be as much concerned about bringing settlers from the other side of the Atlantic as in bringing back our own people. Moreover, there are people in our towns and cites who have come from farms and have not made a success of city life, who, he believed, would welcome a chage to return to farm life under favoring conditions. In any case, wherever the people are found to go on the farm, if a market for their products is not assured, the experiment will not prove a success.

Touching the matter of industries apart from farming, Mr. Schiffield said he had not given it sufficient study to have matured opinions, but that also would be considered by the executive of the new association.
