FOR UNION WITH WEST INDIES

Harry J. Crowe Sees Much Good as Result

Newfoundland Included in Federation as Only Way to Make Independence from United States - Sees Only Two Ways for Future

"I am glad Lord Rothermere came out with his suggestion to sell part of the West Indies to the United States," is a statement made by Harry J. Crowe who has recently returned to Montreal after paying a visit to the West Indies and to England, where he discussed the question of a Canadian-West Indian union with the colonial office, as well as with the people of Jamaica. "It would be a good thing if a few more prominent statesmen advocated this," he added, "it would make people discuss the causes of the present state of affairs in the West Indies and awaken them to a full realization of the value of a Canadian-West Indian-Bermuda-Newfoundland federation, the one and only way of making these countries independent of the United States."

Mr. Crowe, whose business office is in Toronto and who is interested in some large development undertakings in Canada and Newfoundland, is an ardent advocate of a British-American dominion, which he says would be second to no other nation for variety of climate and resources, lying as it would midway between two of the world's greatest markets, Europe and the Far East, and only by a row of maple trees. Canada's future would then confirm a prophecy made 230 years ago: "Westward the course of empire takes its way;" and that the day would surely come when this dominion would have a population to correspond with her size and resources, and would be the brightest gem in the commonwealth of British nations. Referring to the West Indies, Mr. Crowe declared that the choice now lies between absorption by the United States or confederation with Canada. "United States interests," he said, "are making tremendous efforts to subjugate the West Indies in an economic way. Already the chief export of Jamaica has been completely captured by an American trust. Attempts to create competition in the banana business are ruthlessly crushed by this gigantic monopoly which has reduced the producer to economic slavery and has made this valuable article of food, which should be on every poor man's table, a luxury to the consumer."

"If the West Indies were federated with Canada, free interchange of commerce that would follow would lower the cost of living in both countries, and with Canada's bargaining power with other nations to back up the West Indies in the markets of the world, the present stagnation of these strategically situated, rich, tropical British possessions would be changed to a state of abundant prosperity."

As showing what the "peaceful penetration" of the United States meant, Mr. Crowe said that the latter already has a larger trade with all the West Indies than with South America or even China with her 400,000,000 consumers.

"The Board of Railway Commissioners have been asked by the wholesale grocery interests concerned with this trade in the eastern districts, to disallow this proposed increasing demand, and our manufacturers and farmers will have lost a growingly important market of 2,000,000 consumers for their products, and in those who have secured a position of high strategic value.

Mr. Crowe said the opening of the Panama Canal had a direct bearing upon the problem of consolidating our imperial resources in this important part of our empire, towards which our statesmen in the mother country, Canada and the West Indies should turn their attention. He said that the British Empire, at least will be lost to the British Empire. It is only necessary to glance at a map showing the new trade routes that have been opened up by the Isthmian highway to see where this opportunity lies.

Mr. Crowe laid emphasis upon the desire of Canada to continue to have the most friendly relations with our southern neighbor, and he believed that this could be best maintained by presenting a solid but friendly front, and adhering to the British policy of what we have held.

Rather than part with any of these outposts of the empire, Mr. Crowe concluded, "we should by sounder tariff organization, upon a scientific plan, have them respectively in empire interchange. Then the fear entertained by Lord Rothermere of discharging our imperial duties, would be met without parting with any of our rich heritage. The ties of blood and sentiment proved strong enough to hold together the scattering possessions of the British crown throughout a period of terrible crisis, and I believe were never stronger than they are today; and we must consolidate and develop the resources of our vast empire."

HIGHER CANNED GOODS Result if New Railway Rates Are Allowed

(Montreal Gazette) Announcement has been made by the various railway companies of a change in rates applying to canned goods from Ontario points, which are the centre of the Canadian canning business, the proposed rates providing for an increase running from 15 to 30 per cent.

It was stated yesterday that tariffs had been issued by the railways proposing to cancel the commodity rates on canned goods in carload lots from Ontario to Montreal and eastern territory, substituting therefore the regular class rates. This, it was stated, would mean an advance of from 4 to 7 cents per 100 pounds in rates to Montreal and corresponding increases to other eastern points.

Roughly speaking it to other eastern points. The Board of Railway Commissioners have been asked by the wholesale grocery interests concerned with this trade in the eastern districts, to disallow this proposed new tariff. It was stated that the rates on canned goods, in common with other railway rates, had been advanced 45 per cent. to 20 per cent. during the war, and the trade felt that the railways were not entitled to any further advance in rates on this particular product, which is in such general use, especially during the winter, as the last advance granted jumped the rates 25 per cent. at one time, on top of previous advances.

"Should such an advance in rates be allowed by the Board of Railway Commissioners," said a leading wholesale grocer yesterday, "it will inevitably be followed by a proportionate increase in the already high prices of canned goods. We, however, hope that when our appeal is presented, the Railway Board will disallow the proposed new tariff."

Jackson came tripping merrily into his tiny hall one day and almost spoiled his merriment by tripping over some one's shoes left lying about.

"Those ferrisboats are those in the hall?" he asked later when he entered the drawing room.

"Ferrisboats?" said his mother-in-law angrily. "Why, those are my shoes."

"My dear, good lady," said Jackson hurriedly, "who said ferrisboats, you know-ferry boats!"

And then he wiped the sweat from his brow.

One year's supply of coal for New York loaded in fifty-four cars, and a train reaching from that city to Salt Lake City.
